

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

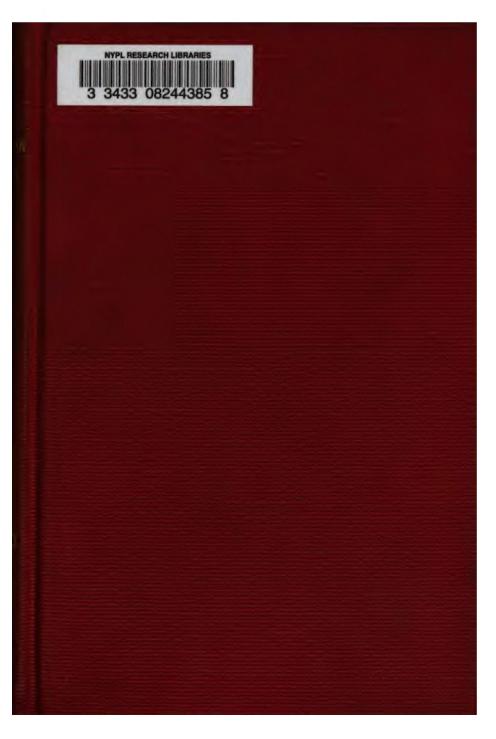

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

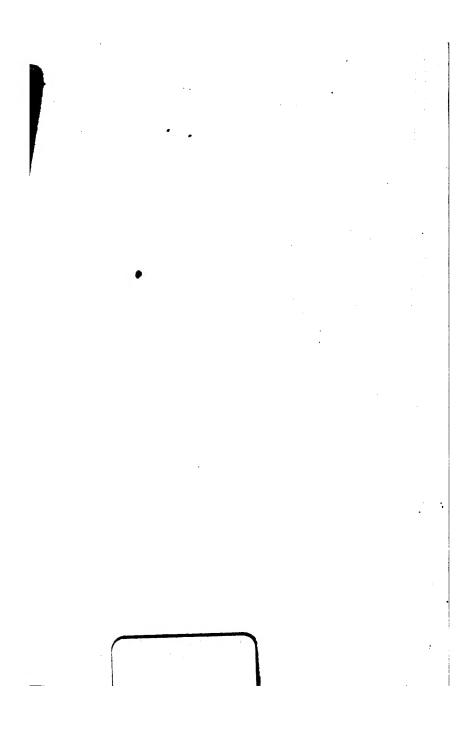

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

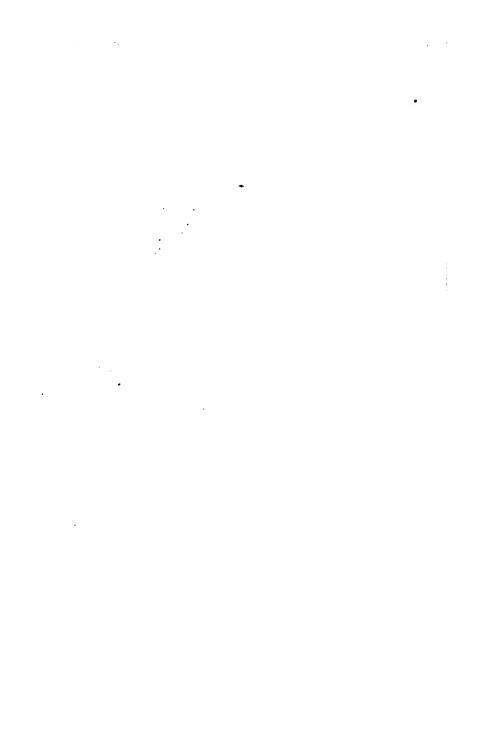

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

PREFACE.

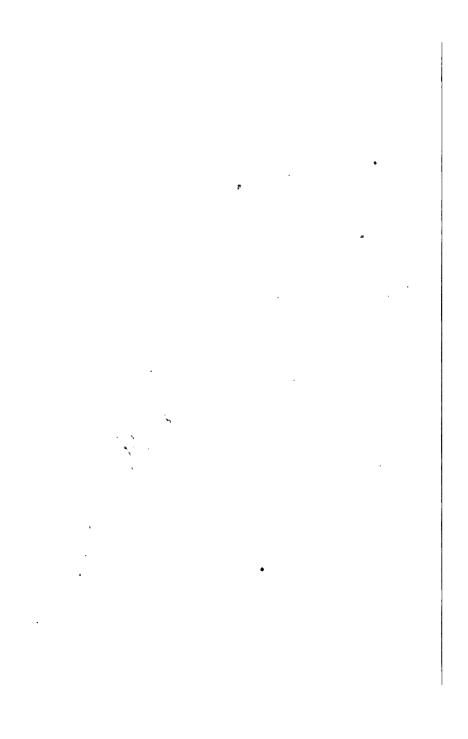

This year's issue of the Australian Almanac, being the fourteenth annual Volume, it is hardly necessary to preface the Work with any explanations regarding the value of such a publication.

The large circulation which the previous years' volumes of this Work have had, not only in this Colony, but in England, Scotland, and Ireland, as well as the other Australian Colonies, proves beyond a doubt that the Work has been appreciated by the Public at large, and that the AUSTRALIAN ALMANAC has already acquired an established reputation.

The Publishers beg to state that it will be their endeavour, in future issues of the Australian Almarac, to maintain the character it has already, so deservedly, attained, under the able management of the late Editor and Proprietor, Mr. James W. Waugh, on behalf of whom the Publishers beg to thank those who have so kindly supplied much of the necessary information; and for themselves, they would now solicit a continuance of those favors that have for so many years been accorded to him.

Any suggestions or information for the improvement of future issues will at all times be gladly received.

Sydney, 31st December, 1862.

EXPLANATION OF THE ASTRONOMICAL PORTION OF THE CALENDAR.

8.58

. Horizontal Parallax

A few words of explanation of this portion of our work, which may be required for its better comprehension by some of our readers, will not be deemed out of place.

It contains the principal articles of the Calendar, commonly given in works of this nature—some of which, indeed, are of little general utility, but seem consecrated by long usage and their retention in the Calendars of the English Church; and others, again which are matters of more curiosity than utility—such as the Jewish and Mohammedan new years; others which are of necessity in our intercourse with this busy world—such as the Fixed and Moveable Feasts, which affect our days of rest and labor; together with the occurrence of Eclipses, and other utusual phenomena, which appear to the ignorant to disturb the laws of Nature. There are only two Eclipses of the Moon, possessing the slightest interest for the inhabit tants of Australia; of those of the Sun one is also far removed from sight.

The first page of the Calendar directs attention to the appearance of some of the most conspicuous and brilliant of the ornaments of the starry heavens, phenomena which can hardly fail to attract the notice and awaken the curiosity of the most incurious observer, the older and best known Planets; also to some of the most interesting of the Fixed Stars, at recognizable points and times. It gives the position of the Sun at certain times in relation to our zenith, and his place in the zodiac. Also the length of the day which is increased four or five minutes by refraction.

The Sun's semi-diameter, which belongs to the matter on the second page occurs on this, for typographical convenience.

The general information of an Almanac, the days of the week, Sundays, Saints Days, Bank and Public Holidays, Royal Birthdays, and a few Chronological Epochs and Memoranda are also found on this page.

The second page contains various items of great practical utility, and the utmost care has been bestowed to ensure the correctness of the computations The motion of the Sun in the Heavens not being the uniform velocity, his return to the Meridian or true Northern point is not performed in equal periods of time. In all observations, therefore, where the place of the Sun forms an element, it is necessary to be aware with perfect correctness of the exact variation of this period, as compared with that which would be shewn by a clock going with perfect accuracy during the whole of the year. The Solar day, from which what is termed Solar or apparent time is derived, varies from that of the accurate watch, or what is termed Mean Time, as much as 16 minutes, and the daily difference between them is called the Equation of Time, which is accurately given on our second page, and the difference between Solar and Mean time, is found by means of it. When the precept add is found at the head of the column, the clock ought to be faster by so much than a perfect sun dial, or the time deduced from the sun's altitude. Thus, when on the 1st of January, the Sun is on the Meridian and a correct sun dial would point to exact noon, the perfect chronometer would show 12h. 3m. 38s 80.

The Sun's Declination has been accurately computed for the meridian of Sydney, at apparent noon, and may be confidently used for nautical purposes, and the Sun's semi-diameter can be applied from the last page, where extreme accuracy of computation is required.

The time of High Water has been the object of special attention, and, although such calculations are of necessity only approximate, will, it is hoped, be found to te ascertained with as much accuracy as the nature of the subject will allow, and in all cases sufficiently near the truth for all practical purposes.

The time of rising and setting of the Planets, and the declination, will serve to ascertain when, and in what part of the heavens these objects will be visible.

MEMORANDA.

Although the colony was founded on the 26th of January, it was the 7th of February ere the formal proceedings and the necessary installation of Government took place. For obvious reasons all possible solemnity was given to it, on a space previously cleared the whole colony was assembled, the military drawn up and under arms, the convicts stationed apart, and near the Governor those who were to hold the principal offices under him. The Royal Commission was then read, after which the Governor advancing, addressed first the soldiers, then the convicts, concluding it by declaring his earnest desire to render the settlement advantageous and honorable to his country.

MEMORANDA.

The Bank of New South Wales holds its half yearly meeting this month, also the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company and the following Insurance Companies, New South Wales Marine, Sydney Fire Insurance, Pacific Fire and Marine, and United Fire and Life.

12th, English Mail steamer due at Melbourne, and 16th at Sydney.

Leaves Sydney on the 22nd.

13th, Balance day, Bank of Australasia.

20th Easter Monday, is generally observed as a complete holiday. 23rd, Holiday at the Banks and Public Offices.

On the early settlement of the colony, and while it had yet to depend on the mother-country for supplies, the scarcity of provisions was at times very great. On the 20th April, 1790, we find the weekly ration issued at Sydney, consisted of 21 fbs. flour, 2 lbs. rice, and 2 lbs. pork per man, which was still further reduced on hearing of the wreck of the Sirius, at Norfolk Island. The Governor receiving daily the same ration, as the meanest convict in the territory.

MEMORANDA.

10th, English Mail due at Melbourne, and 14th at Sydney, leaves Sydney on 22nd.

This month was regarded by our ancestors as the genial harbinger of summer.

In this country there is nothing particular to characterize the month, In May 1804, the shock of an earthquake was felt at Parramatta, Prospect, and the Hawkesbury, and in 1805 an extraordinary influx of the tide was observed at Norfolk Island.

It is remarkable that among the thirty-three sovereigns who have sat on the English throne since William the Conqueror, although each of the eleven months has witnessed the accession of one or more, the month of May has not been so fortunate, none having ascended the throne within its limits.

New Zealand was declared independent of New South Wales, 3rd May, 1841.

MEMORANDA.

The names of the days of the week are all of Saxon origin and commemorated the deities of our Heathen Ancestry, thus Sunday—from the idol of the Sun whom they worshiped. He was represented as a man half naked, with his face like the Sun, holding a burning wheel on his breast with both hands: signifying his course round the world, and by his gleams the light and heat wherewith he nourishes and warms all things.

The Saxons were accustomed to call this month Weydmonat and Brackmonat, the former derived from Weiden, and the latter from Braccan, to break the soil, both significant of the season.

10th, English Mail due at Melbourne, and on 14th at Sydney. 30th, Last day for taking out Licences for Publicans, Packet, Bagatelle, and Billiards. Half yearly balance day, Union Bank.

MEMORANDA.

This month is prolific in half yearly meetings of Public Companies, as we find the following recorded, Joint Stock Bank, Commercial Bank, Australasian Steam Navigation Company—Clarence and Richmond River Steam Company, Australian General Assurance, Newcastle Coal and Copper Company, Newcastle Wallsend Coal Company, Tomago Coal Company, Pyrmont Bridge Company and Sydney Exchange Company.

English Mail due at Melbourne on the 11th, and Sydney on 15th. Our Colonial Annals record the substitution of the Colonial Dollar, in lieu of the local currency, 1st July, 1813; and in 1824, the death of Governor Macquarie, at London. The foundation of Macquarie Tower and Lighthouse was laid 18th July, 1816; and in 1826, a settlement was first forward in the new populous and testile district of Theorem.

first formed in the now populous and fertile district of Illawarra.

This month still retains its name in honor of Julius Cæsar, who among his better deeds of ambition reformed the calendar. Our Saxon ancestors called it Hay Monat, expressive of the field operations at that time. St. Swithin who was assumed to have a miraculous power over the weather claims the 15th as his own.

MEMORANDA.

The Anglo Saxons gave to each month a name expressive of the operations usually carried on each period. Barn monat was the name applied to this month, because their barns were generally filled with the fruits of harvest then general at this time.

The Romans divided their months into Calends, Ides and Nones. The first day was called Calends, the fifth the Nones, the thirteenth the Ides, except in March, May, July and October, when the Nones fell on the seventh, and the Ides on the fifteenth.

The Tax Papers for the City and Water Rates for the half year ending 30th June, will be delivered this month. Parties would do well to remember that unless paid within 14 days after delivery of such notice Distress Warrants are authorized to be issued.

The Half yearly meeting of the Australian Gas Company is held this month, also the New Hunter River Steam Navigation Company.

English Mail due at Melbourne on the 10th, and Sydney on the 14th, leaves Sydney on the 22nd.

Michaelmas Day

George Whitfield died 1770

The Julian year or old style was introduced by Julius Cæsar, who, undertook to amend the Roman Calendar. He made his year consist of 365 days for three successive years; but every fourth year 366 days 6 hours. This was however found to be too much by a few minutes, which in the lapse of several centuries made a difference of 11 days.

The 3rd, of September was always regarded by Cromwell as his "fortunate day." On the two successive anniversaries of that day, he gained his famous victories of Dunbar and Worcester; yet subsequently, on that very day, agreeably with a strange prophecy of Colonel Lindsay, the Protector breathed his last,

Telescopes were not invented for many years after the times of Copetnicus, but with miserable wooden instruments on which the lines were often only marked with ink, he made the signal discovery that the Sun is the centre of our Planetary System, and that the Earth and Planets revolve round it.

Our Saxon ancestors called this Wynmonat or Wine Month, we presume from the Brown October still considered to be superior to the brewings of any other menth.

MEMORANDA.

10th, English Mail due at Melbourne, and Sydney 14th, leaves this on the 22nd.

30th, Holiday at the Banks and Public offices. The Synod of Eastern Australia holds its annual meeting on the first Wednesday of the month.

This month begins the Australian summer, which extends to the 1st of March. During this period though the thermometer range from 75 to 95, the cooling sea breezes which are felt more or less over so much of the colony, render the heat rarely oppressive.

Wint-monath, or the Windy month, or the Blood month, was the name given by our ancestors to this month, the latter designation from the number of cattle slaughtered at this time.

Martinmas, or the festival of St. Martin, occurs on the 11th. It is one of the old quarterly terms, and is still used as such, particularly in Scotland. The Saint himself is said te have been one of the most celebrated of the Romish Calendar. Severus affirms that he equalled Plato, Socrates, and the Apostles.

It was in 1824 that the first overland expedition to Port Phillip was accomplished. Mr. Hamilton Hume accompanied by Mr. Hovel set out on an exploring expedition from Lake George to Bass's Straits. They first discovered the Hume River, then the Ovens, then the Goulburn, and after traversing a beautiful pastoral country, reached the north eastern arm of Port Phillip, on 16th December, 1824. The Townships of Campbelltown, Windsor, Richmond, Pitt Town, Wilberforce, Castlereagh and Liverpool received their local habitations and their names in December, 1810.

December, the last month of our year, was severally called by our Saxon forefathers Christ-monat, because in this month Christ was born, Winter-monat, and Giul Erra or the first or former Giul. It was the feast of Thor, celebrated in the Winter Solstice.

GARDEN AND FIELD CALENDAR.

JANUARY.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Continue to sow for succession peas, beans, turnips, carrots, lettuce, parmips, radish, parsley, and all herbs, cauliflowers, broccoli, &c. If you wish to have a regular supply of these, some should be planted out every ten or twelve days. If you have not ground enough at liberty, plant them between the rows of peas and beans, and by the time the plants are struck and begin to grow, the peas and beans will be ready to take up. Transplant leeks and celery. Pull up forward crops of keeping onions, and stop shoots of pumpkins, vegetable marrow, cucumbers, &c. Water plants that have lately been put out, seed beds and young seedlings.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Nothing spoils the appearance of a garden so much as weeds and dead leaves: these should be removed as they appear. Water should not be spared, care being taken to do so only after the sun has gone down. Trim and regulate plants. Dahlias may be planted. Stake and carefully tie up such as require it. Shade delicate plants from the scorcaing mid-day sun.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Bud fruit trees, roses, and choice shrubs. Carefully attend to vines keeping them free from weeds and insects. Gather ripe fruit. Thin what is superfluous. Birds are very destructive to fruit, and should be watched where it can be done. It is well to tie up the hunches of grapes in paper or mislin haps.

to tie up the bunches of grapes in paper or muslin bags.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Clean and hill up maize. Break up ground for barley, &c. Cut tobacco crop, which should be ready about the end of the month. Carefully go over the cotton crop, and gather all ripe pods.

FEBRUARY.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Celery must be earthed up as required, and more may be planted out for a succession. Continue to sow peas, beans, beet, turnips, broccoli, &c., and plant out whatever may be left in the seed beds. Carefully attend to cucumber plants, watering well in dry weather.

FLOWER GARDEN—Thin out dahlia buds. Plant out perennial and FLOWER GARDEN—Thin out dahlia buds. Plant out perennial and biennial flower plants, such as stocks, sweet-williams, &c., in cloudy days, and give them water. Keep all beds and borders free from weeds; remove all decayed bloom.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Attend to all fruit trees, removing all ripe fruit. Clear grape vines from all useless shoots and tendrils; see that all the branches are exposed to the sun and air.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow Cape barley and turnips. Plant potatoes. Keep maize crops clean. Cut tobacco. Gather all ripe cotton pods, taking care not to injure or break the plants.

MARCH.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow vegetables as in last month. Plant potatoes, cauliflower, broccoli, eschalota, celery, lettuce, &c. Clear and thin spinach and earth up turnips, potatoes, celery, &c., as they seem to require it. Hoe the ground and destroy all weeds. If it was not done before tie up your onions, choosing a dry day for the purpose; seed should also be gathered in dry weather as they ripen, such as leeks, onions, &c.; thin your seed beds, FLOWER GARDEN.—Weeds cannot be too carefully eradicated, and water should be plentifully used in dry weather. If the ground becomes caked as it is apt to do, loosen it with a light hoe or rake. Plant Cape bulbs. Propagate herbaceous plants. Keep flower beds and borders clean and in good order.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.-In moist weather, plant out straw.

berries. Examine fruit trees and vines. Gather all ripe fruit.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Prepare ground for wheat, oats, &c., Sow Cape barley, mangel wurzel, &c., and towards the end of the month, wheat. Gather sorghum sacharatum if ripe, and cotton pods.

APRIL.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—If you have any large cabbage plants in seed beds, plant them out in rows. Plant also culinary herbs. Earth up your celery as required. Continue to sow peas, broccoli, lettuce, onions, turnips, radish, beans, cabbages. Dress all your beds, thinning out carrots, turnips, parsnips, &c. And at your vacant time, prepare new beds, trenching and manuring all unoccupied ground.

parsings, ac. And at your vacant time, prepare new beds, trenching and manuring all unoccupied ground.

Flower Garden.—Plant different kinds of bulbs, such as tulips, &c. Flowering shrubs, and herbaceous plants may be propagated and transplanted. When tender plants have to be removed, keep as much earnhabout the roots as possible. This is a good month for making edges round borders. Box, lavender, thyme, daisies, sea pinks, &c., make very nice edgings; but when these cannot be carried out in sufficient quantities, a good border of turf looks very well, but it must always be kept very clean and well trimmed.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant raspberry, gooseberry, strawberry and currants. Gather all ripe fruit. In pruning raspberries all the old stems that produced fruit this summer must be taken out.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow wheat, Cape barley and oats. The tobacco crop should be carefully watched, and cut as it becomes ripe.

MAY.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow broad beans, peas, onions, cabbages, radishes, lettuce and spinach. Transplant horse radish, eschalots, rhubarb, asparagus, leeks, and all culinary herbs. Save cabbages and onions for seed. Trench and manure new ground. Clean all beds from weeds. Pumpkins and vegetable marrow that have not yet been gathered, should now be done if quite ripe; taking care to store them in a dry place.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant biennial and perennial plants, bulbs, shrubs, ornamental trees, and edging. Keep grass walks, lawns, and flower borders clean. Take up, dry, and store dahlia roots. Transplant native shrubs.

Manure and trench new ground.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant nut, apple, pear, cherry, mulberry, olive, almond, quince, plum, apricot trees, &c. Dig in manure round all kinds of fruit trees. Take off all green autumnal fruit. Trench and prepare new ground.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow Cape and English barley, wheat, eats for hay crop, lucerne, &c. Tobacco should be all in this month. Gather cotton. Maize should also be ready this month.

JUNE,

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, beans, spinach, cauliflewer, radish parsley, onions, lettuce, mustard, cress, asparagus, rhubarb, &c. Draw the earth lightly round the stems of such young plants as are risen above the ground, such as beans, &c. Plant all culinary herbs. Trench and manure vacant ground.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant cuttings of the funchia, geranium, cactus, &c. Plant Cape bulbs, flowering shrubs, ornamental trees, herbaceous plants—edging and borders. Prepare lawn and flower beds. Take up Dahlia roots if not done last month. This is a good month for transplanting or removing.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant apple, pear, quince, apricot, and all kinds of fruit trees. Prune vines, and trim fruit trees, digging in manure carefully so as not to cut the roots.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Sow spring barley, but on fine soil; and wheat, if the season has been dry. Gather maize. Prepare new land for cotton by deep ploughing. The crop should be all in by the middle of this month.

JULY.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow prickly spinach, carrot, turnip, parsnip, colery, cauliflower, peas, beans, onions, leeks, lettuce, and parsley. Plant asparagus, cabbage, broccoli, lettuce, rhubarb, artichokes, and all kiuds of pot herbs Sow early cucumbers in hot beds. Pull off what loose and decayed leaves there may be. Earth up all peas and beans that have appeared above ground: this seems to strengthen the plant. Spinach may be sown in drills between the rows of peas and beans. Red cabbage plants may now be planted.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Sow hardy annuals, biennials and perennials. Plant native and other shrubs, and indigenous creepers, herbaceous plants, trees, &c. Should the weather be dry, water newly-planted trees and shrubs, and keep beds and borders clean. Camelias which should flower this month require to be looked after. Dahlis roots, if not already stored, should be taken up and done now.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.--Dress vines. Prune gooseberry, currant, and raspberry bushes. Plant vines, bananas, apple, pear, quince, peach, orange, limes, apricot, pomegranate, gooseberry, currant, and raspberry. Clean and dress the ground. Continue to prune common fruit trees and vines. Plant all deciduous trees not later than this month.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Plough for tobacco. In the colder parts of the colony, wheat and barley may be sown this month. Manure and dress cotton plants, and prepare new land.

AUGUST.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow beet, carrot, turnip, spinach, peas of different kinds, parsnips, French beans, brocooli, cabbage, Scotch kale, sea kale,

Garden and Field Calendar.

Brussels sprouts, broad beans, leeks, onions, celery, radish, cucumber, melons, culiuary herbs, &c. Radish and lettuce seeds should be sownesse or three different times this month. Plant potatoes, cabbages, cauliflowers, artichokes, rhubarb, and all kinds of culinary herbs. Earth up asparagus with sand and manure. Let the air freely circulate, and keep down weeds. If you have any vacant ground in your garden, trench it, to be in readiness

FLOWER GARDEN.—Dig and dress flower beds. Sow annuals. Plant carnations, and all sorts of herbaceous plants. Finish planting trees and shrubs, &c., this month. Annuals and perennials may be sown towards the end of the month, if the weather is mild.

ORCHAED AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Plant banava, eitron, lime, orange, lemon, guava, fig, custard-apple, and loquats. All evergreen fruit trees should be in this month. Prune vines, fig, and common fruit trees. Hoe strawberry beds and keep orchard clean.

FIELD OPERATIONS .- Manure and prune cotton plants. Prepare new land for cotton, maize, and tobacco. Plant potatoes. Early tobacco erop may be sown late this month.

SEPTEMBER.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, broad beans, French beans, cucumber, lettuce, cabbage, Swedish tnrnip, Brussels sprouts, broccoli, endive, leeks, omions, melons, pumpkins, vegetable marrow, radishes, spinach, parsley, capsicums, tomatoes, &c. Plant potatoes, thyme, marjoram, garlick, eschalots, rhubarb, kale, artichokes, lettuce, cauliflower, and cabbage. Dress asparagus, and artichoke beds. Keep all the ground free from weeds as far as possible.

FLOWER GARDEN. - Plant dahlias, carnations, ranunculus, anemones. and roses. Train climbing plants. Protect tulips and other tender flowers. Sow tender annuals, and other flowers, as stocks, &c. Destroy all insects. Hand weed small beds; and water flower beds, should the weather be dry.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Be careful in removing all insects and keeping the ground clean. Tend vines and put out cuttings. Sow melons of all sorts. Prune, graft, and plant young trees.

FIELD OPERATIONS .- Sow tobacco, maize, Swedish turnips, sorghum. lucerne, and all artificial grasses. Sow cotton seeds. All kinds of manuring and pruning should be completed early this month.

OCTOBER.

KITCHEN GARDEN. Sow peas, French beans, celery, onions, turnips, pumpkins, vegetable marrow, cucumber, lettuce, radish, endive, cabbage, broccoli. Plant sweet potatoes, capsicums, garlick, eschalots. Earth up celery. At all times keep the beds free from weeds. And this month they will be showing themselves with strong desire to dispute the possession of the ground.

PLOWER GARDEN.-Sow balsams and tender annuals, biennial. perennials, stock and mignionettes. Continue to train climbing plants. The roots of the bulbs that have done flowering should be taken up and stored. Water frequently in dry weather and shade plants recently transplanted.

Garden and Field Calendar.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Look carefully after new budded trees. Remove all barren shoots and tendrils from vines. Lop all fruit bearing shoots. Destroy all insects. Remove all suckers as they advance Water well in dry weather.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Prepare new land. Sow maize and sorghum. Plant tobacco. Sow cotton seed, and keep the young plants free from weeds.

NOVEMBER.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow pumpkins, cucumbers, cauliflowers, vegetable marrows, endive, lettuce, spinach, celery, peas, rhubarb. Water and shade cucumbers if weather be dry. Earth up celery. Keep all beds free from weeds, and thin plants where necessary.

weeds, and thin plants where necessary.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant dahlias. When tulips, hyacinths, and other bulbs have done flowering they should be taken up and dried. Propagate carnations by layers. Clear flower borders, shrubberies, and [walks from weeds and dead leaves. In dry weather do not spare water; but, as has been already remarked, this operation should only be performed after sundown.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Remove all useless shoots from fruit trees and grape vines; trim and tie up vines exposing the bunches to the sun. Thin trees of superfluous fruit, and gather fruit as they ripen.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Attend carefully to young tobacco plants—keep.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Attend carefully to young tobacco plants—keeping the ground clear of weeds. Earth up maize. Sow millet and sorghum. Watch young cotton plants. The harvest commences towards the end of this month.

DECEMBER.

KITCHEN GARDEN.—Sow peas, beans, cabbages, cauliflowers, radishes, endive, carrots, parsnips, turnips, rhubarb, spinach. Plant potatoes, celery in trenches to blanch, earthing it up gradually, eschalots, cabbages, and cauliflowers. Clean and thin beds. Stop superfluous shoots of cucumber, pumpkin, &c. The routine for October, November, and December, is very much the same, both for the kitchen and the flower garden. At this season two things require to be constantly borne in mind, weed well and water well.

FLOWER GARDEN.—Plant all hardy kinds of annuals and dahlias for succession. Take up and dry bulbs. Shade and water as required.

ORCHARD AND FRUIT GARDEN.—Let the grapes receive great attention. Secure trees planted in autumn from being shaken by the winds; destroy all insects; remove suckers; thin fruit, and gather as they ripen.

FIELD OPERATIONS.—Top tobacco; removing all side shoots, and those that hang on the ground, leaving from eight to twelve according the size and strength of the plant. Earth up maize and potatoes. Attend to and regulate cotton plants. The harvest should be general this month.

OBSERVATIONS

ON THE

SNAKES AND THE LIZARDS RESEMBLING SNAKES,

AND ON

BIRDS DESTRUCTIVE TO REPTILES

NEW SOUTH WALES,

BY GEORGE BENNETT, M.D., F.L.S., &c., &c.

Of the class Reptilia, which includes according to the system of Cuvier crocodiles, lizards, snakes, &c., upwards of about 2000 species are at present known; of these, snakes form a large number in proportion to the other, and the object of this communication is to impart information respecting some of the anatomical peculiarities of this class of reptiles, and to mention all the knowledge we have at present discovered respecting the venomous and harmless serpents found in the colony of New South Wales, and the list includes all the species at present known and described.

We find that snakes are for the most part indolent in habits, their digestion slow, their sensations obtuse, and although the warmth of summer or the heat of tropical climates render them more lively and vigorous, yet in the winter they again become torpid. They are called "cold blooded," because in reptiles the heart acts in such a manner that on each contraction it sends into the lungs only a portion of the blood it has received from various parts of the body, and the remainder returns to the several divisions of the system without having passed through the lungs, and, as it is a well known physiological fact, that respiration communicates heat to the blood, it is the reason why reptiles are termed "cold blooded." The small size of the pulmonary vessels also permits them to suspend respiration, and to remain a longer period of time under water than most of the mammifera or birds. The lungs are composed of large cells, are not very vascular, and respiration is not very active in the reptilia.

Most persons who are accustomed to observe, are surprised at the peculiar progressive motion of the anakes, and no satisfactory explanation was ever made of the cause, until it was first noticed by Sir Joseph Banks during the exhibition of a large snake, who, while it was moving briskly along the carpet, thought he observed the ribs come forward in succession like the feet of a centipede, and when the hand was laid flat under the belly of the creature, the motions could be distinctly felt in their extremities. The influence of the ribs in the progressive motion of snakes, was further investigated anatomically, and became at last an established fact. The ribs are found to be articulated, by a beautiful mechanism, to the transverse processes of the vertebræ by shallow ball and socket joints, which admit of their being moved backwards and forwards, in an axis passing perpendicularly through the joints. The ligaments, independent of the articular capsule, are so disposed as to limit the motions of the ribs to these directions.

There are two ligaments—one situated below the joint, which passes from the head of the rib to the transverse process, and from thence is continued to the capsule of the intervertebral articulation; the other strengthens the upper part of the joint, and connects the neck of the rib to the transverse process. The muscles which act are arranged in a peculiar manner, and consist of several distinct sets which have been well and minutely described by Sir Everard Home, who observes that "When the snake begins to move, the ribs on the opposite sides are separated from each other, and the small cartilages at the ends of them are bent upon the upper surfaces of the abdominal scutce, on which the ends of the ribs rest; and as the ribs move in pairs, the scutce, or transverse plates on the abdomen under each pair, is carried along with it. This scutum, by its posterior edge lays hold of the ground, and becomes a fixed point of progression, from which to start." This movement is seen to the greatest advantage when a snake is passing over an angle to get upon a flat surface. When the animal is in motion, it alters its shape from a circular or oval form, to something approaching to a triangle, of which the surface on the ground forms the base.

The teeth both in the venomous and harmless snakes differ in their position and also in number, they are not in structure formed for mastication, and are curved inward for the retention of their prey. In the poisonous snakes the maxillary bones have only the poison fangs, and one fang is found on each side with several in different stages of growth ready to replace them when lost, and it has been stated that the poison fangs are shed by a process analogous to that which takes place in the teeth of fishes, that is cast forth at regular intervals and replaced by new teeth. In the water snakes that are venomous, the superior maxillary bones have simple teeth as well as poisonous fangs.

In the diamond and carpet snakes of this colony which are not venomous, the sharp pointed teeth are in a double row above on each side, and are inclined backwards, thus offering no impediment to the passage of the prey, but securely detains the victim. On examining this double row of teeth, one it may be observed runs along the upper jaw bone, and the other is situated on the palatal bone. In the death adder, black, brown and other venomous snakes of New South Wales, on examining the upper jaw there may be seen on each side a long recurved pointed tooth, traversed by a canal leading from a large gland, situated beneath the eye, these are the poison fangs and are the only teeth truly found in the upper jaw, the others are ranged on each side along the bones of the palate, the lower jaw being only partially furnished with teeth. It has been doubted whether all poisonous snakes have these peculiar fangs: many species, destitute of these fangs, are said to have posterior teeth of large size, grooved, and possessing a large maxillary gland. These, in the countries they inhabit, are considered poisonous, and this assertion has been both proved by the experience of the natives, and confirmed by the experiments of eminent naturalists.

The fangs of the venomous snakes lie hidden in a fold of the gum, and the glands which secrete the poison are found on the sides of each branch of the upper jaw, behind the orbit. They are granulated similar to the salivary glands, and two muscles which raise the fangs traverse them from from to back, one outwards, the other underneath, so that they cannot act without compressing the gland and impelling the poison into the excretory canal, which conducts it to the base of the fangs. When the snake is about to bite, the fangs are raised by the act of biting, and compresses by aid of the muscles before mentioned the poison glands, and the poisonous secretion is by that means instilled into the punctured wound.

The poison of venomous snakes has been described by those who have analyzed it as being neither acid or alkaline; that of the viper of Europe which has been most examined, does not redden the tincture of turnsole (Heliotropium) or turn green the syrup of violets. It is neither acid nor burning. It produces no sensation on the tongue, but one analogous to that caused by the fresh fat of animals. It produces no effervescence with acids. When fresh it is slightly viscous, and when dry, it adheres like pitch. It participates very much of the nature of mucus.

Much difficulty has been experienced to verify by facts the different species of Australian snakes, and their geographical range over the extensive Australian continent; many described as species have since been found to be the young of one species, differing in their markings from the more mature specimen. It is therefore only by observing these reptiles in a state of nature, and when kept alive, to watch them with close attention and accurate observation; and also when in captivity, to place them as near as possible is a state approximating to their natural habits, that their true actions as when in their native haugts can be ascertained with accuracy; for reptiles as well as those of a higher order in the animal kingdom of nature often differ widely in habits during their confinement from when seen roaming about in a wild state. For instance, on reading the statements of the incubation of the python in the Zoological Gardens of the Regent's Park, I considered the creature was more likely protecting than attempting to hatch her eggs; not following habits natural to her when in her native haunts, but adapting her actions to the peculiar position in which she was situated during captivity, added to her natural maternal solicitude for the protection of her progeny exposed to the intense curiosity of keepers, naturalists, and the ardent gaze of the public in general, and the solicitude and sympathy of the ladies in particular.

I hope this communication will be the means of inducing many persons who have leisure to devote some of their spare time and attention to the study of the changes, economy, and extent of range of each species, and record from time to time the facts collected. Mr. Krefft, the acting curator of the Australian museum, has done much for Australian ophiology, and has contributed numerous facts during his short residence in the colony towards the elucidation of many doubtful points both in the specific differences, distribution, and economy of these reptiles; and Mr. Alfred Roberts has also devoted much minute attention to the study of this branch of natural history.

During a recent visit to England, I had an opportunity of observing the systematic arrangement adopted by Mr. A. Günther, at the British Museum, who has charge of the department of reptiles and fish in that institution, and since my return to Sydney, New South Wales, I have carefully examined the excellent collection both living and dead, in the Australian Museum, (many of them collected and all arranged by Mr. Kreft) and they form an excellent nucleus for the study of Australian ophiology, as well as for the anakes of other parts of the world. Students who may be desirous of further information respecting the generic and specific characters, can consult the catalogue of the snakes in the British Museum which also includes the whole of the Australian snakes at present known; and also some papers on Australian reptiles in the Annals of Natural History, and the proceedings of the Zoological Society of London; these publications are to be found in the library of the Australian Museum, and can be consulted by any person who may be interested in the study of this department of natural history.

FAMILY VIPERIDE.

The Death Adder—(Acanthopis Antarctica). This is a common snake in New South Wales, is found very numerous even in the vicinity of the city of Sydney, and is highly venomous; indeed, of those at present known full four-fifths of the Australian snakes are poisonous and many very virulent. The death adder is more frequently found in dry, sandy situations, and on roads and pathways, where, when coiled up, it is so torpid in disposition as not readily to move away. It is named "Tammin" by the aborigines of Yass. Its body is peculiarly coloured, the head is broad, with a malignant eye, of a vivid yellow colour, and longitudinal pupil imparting to the reptile a physiognomy so hideous, as only to be surpassed by the puff adder of the Cape, to which—judging from a living specimen I saw in the Zoological Gardens at the Regent's Park—it bears a very close resemblance. The death adder is thick in proportion to its length. The colour of the body is composed of shades of grey, variegated with narrow black lines; the belly is salmon-coloured, with a reddish tinge. It measures in length from two to three feet, and about five inches in circumference. Several I dissected had frogs and small birds in their stomachs. I have seen a full-grown dog bitten by one of these reptiles, which became strongly convulsed in a few minutes afterwards, and died in less than an hour. But it may be mentioned that I consider the rapidity of the death of an animal from the bite of a venomous snake will often vary, depending on the state of excitement of the reptile at the time, the season of the year, or whether the venom has been exhausted by previous attacks. When snakes bite, the fangs are raised upright by the mobility of the sub-maxillary bone.

FAMILY HYDRIDÆ.

The snakes of this family inhabit the sea, and are occasionally found thrown upon the shore by gales of wind or other causes, and are nearly all venomous.

The Black-backed Pelamis (Pelamis bicolor). This is a very handsome snake, and considered by Dumerel and Bibron to be venomous, but on the examination of several specimens preserved in the Australian Museum, I could not detect the poison fangs. If they exist they cannot be longer than the other teeth, and only to be detected by microscopic examination. It is found at Coogee and Long Bay, nearSydney.

The Black-ringed Lapemis (Lapemis curtus). This is an elegant snake, of a beautiful bluish color, with deep black rings. It is venomous, and found on the coast at Coogee and Long Bays, near Sydney. The seanakes may always be known by their flattened tail; but it is a singular physiological fact, that, although inhabiting the sea, their breathing apparatus does not differ from that of land serpents; and on dissecting maparanakes, I usually found small fish in their stomachs, proving that their food is procured at sea, and not, as many suppose, upon the land. Mr. Kreft found a rare species of fish in the stomach of a Pelamis caught in Botany Bay.

PAMILY BOIDE.

The Diamond Snake (Morelia spilotes).—Snakes 1 and 10 of White's Voyage to New South Wales.

The Carpet Snake (Morelia variegata).—There has been some confusion respecting these anakes; but it has now been ascertained with certainty that the carpet snake is not found in the vicinity of Sydney, but in the northern part of the colony; and Mr. Krefft says that the range of the diamond snake is limited to the east coast of Australia, whereas the carpet snake ranges from Western Australia to the Victorian boundary, near the Australian Alps, but is not found south of 37 degrees. The diamond and carpet snakes are harmless, and like true boas capture their living preyas rats, opossums, &c .- from the ground without entirely leaving the tree, and then returning to destroy and gradually devour it. The colour of the diamond snake is dotted over the back with bright yellow spots upon a bluish black or deep purplish ground, each diamond shaped scale, having a yellow spot in the centre of each, forming a group of five or six together, or a kind of tied blotch. The back of the head has an angular band. The abdomen is light yellow, or straw colour. It attains the length of from eight to fifteen feet, but more frequent from eight to ten feet. The carpet snake is of a brownish black, with numerous irregular, black-edged, olive cross blotches, with irregular serrated, and torn edges; head olive, varied with two or three white spots in the centre of the crown, and a broad short band behind each eye. The abdomen is pale yellow colour. At one time it was supposed that both these snakes were identical species—the difference in the markings being either a sexual distinction or from age, but the examination of numerous specimens in every stage of growth, and the different habitats of each species soon decided the question of their being distinct species. Both these reptiles are strictly nocturnal, and during the day the living diamond, carpet, black, and other snakes may be seen in their glass case in the Australian Museum entwined together—a huge cluster of reptilian life in one large coil, and rarely move except when disturbed; but at night they become full of life and activity, and are eager to escape from that place of confinement, where they appeared so tranquil during the day. It shows the wise provision of nature, for the food of these reptiles are also nocturnal in their habits; and we find in Australia a large proportion of the birds, mammalia, and reptiles are nocturnal, more so than is found in any other country in the world.

FAMILY DENDROPHIDE.

The Green tree snake (Dendrophis punctulata). This is a very hand-some snake, and being diurnal in its habits, may often be seen on the trees in the gardens or woods seeking its food, which consists of beetles, grasshoppers, and other insects. I have often seen it at Darling Point and other localities in the vicinity of Sydney. It is perfectly harmless.

FAMILY DIPSADIDÆ.

The Brown tree snake (Dipsas fusca). This snake is also quite harmless, and is very common in the woods and gardens in the environs of Sydney, and is usually from two to three feet in length, slender, and graceful, with a very brilliant eye. It is strictly nocturnal in habits, and is of a dark olive brown colour on the back with the abdomen of a yellowish white colour. The pupil of the eye in the snakes which are nocturnal is linear and horizontal.

FAMILY BLAPSIDE.

This family includes a large proportion of our Australian snakes, and all highly venomous. The Black headed snake (Glyphodon ornatus); the common Whip snake (Diemansia reticulata), this is a very common snake; the Ornamental snake (Diemansia cucullata), this is a new species, discovered recently by Mr. Krefft in the vicinity of Sydney, and described by Dr Günther (Annals Natural History, vol. 9. p. 129), it is of a brownish black colour with the abdomen marked with a lighter tint; the Pale-headed snake (Hoplocephalus pallidiceps), from the northern parts of the colony; the Broad-headed snake (Hoplocephalus variegatus); the Black-bellied snake (Hoplocephalus coronoides), this species is very numerous on the sandy plains about Botany Bay. The Brown banded or yellow snake (Hoplocephalus curtus). This snake has a wide distribution, and is named by the Yass aborigines "Jaruk." All the snakes of this genus are Australia. tralian, all viviparous, and highly venomous. The Yellow snake is of a dark olive green colour over the back, and pale yellow on the abdomen. It has the power, when irritated, of spreading out the integument on the sides of the neck into a broad flat hood, flattening the head at the same time, and flying at the aggressor. One of these snakes entered a cage containing a pet canary belonging to Mrs. John Hay, and, after devouring the inmate, could not make its exit through the wires, and was captured. This snake is often seen on small trees and shrubs in search of its prey, which consists of lizards, small birds, and insects. It appears this snake has an enemy in the "Native Cat" of which we were not before aware, for Mr. Krefft says, "If three or four of the Dasyurus or native cats of the same species are kept in a cage, and food is not native cars of the same species are kept in a cage, and food is not plentifully supplied to them, they attack each other immediately. I have seen a bevy of five devouring each other, and though they did not go as far as the 'Kilkenny cats,' they had strength and pluck enough when reduced to a pair to attack, and partly eat, a good sized brown banded snake which I had introduced into their cage, to give them the comp de grace, completely 'turning the table' upon the highly venomous reptile." The Lead-coloured snake (Hoplocephalus nigrescens). This is a new species, recently discovered by Mr. Krefft, and described by Dr. Günther (Annals of Natural History, vol. 9, p. 131). It is found only in a very (Annals of Natural History, vol. 9, p. 131). It is found only in a very limited range under stones and crevices of rocks about Middle Harbour, in Port Jackson, and as yet in no other locality, and is not common. It attains the length of fifteen inches to two feet, and is of a dark grey colour.

The Black snake (Pseudechys Porphyriacus). This is a very handsome snake, and is found very numerous in marshy places, feeding on frogs, lizards, and small birds. It is of a beautiful glossy black over the back, and blood-red over the abdomen. It is usually from five to eight feet in length. The poison-fangs are small, and many instances have occurred where persons bitten by this reptile have, after much drowsiness, recovered without any treatment. The usual effect of a bite from one of these reptiles is, great drowsiness, the patient expressing a strong desire to sleep, as if poisoned by opium; indeed the symptoms suggest a very similar treatment to that adopted for poisoning by that drug. The treatment adopted by the blacks, in cases of snake bites, is, after sucking the wound, to keep the patient running about, as they say, to prevent him from sleeping, and to obviate the effects of the poison; and we administer ammonia, and like stimulants, on the same principle of treatment. The Black snake is named

Bulbuk by the aborigines of Yass,

The Darting, or brown snake, (Pseudonaja nuchalis). There is a variety of the black snake of a brownish colour, and this circumstance caused this species of snake to be regarded as the female of the black snake, as they are often found together among the swamps, but they are now well known as distinct species. It is from five to eight feet in length; when chased it will turn and dart at its pursuer, for this reason, it has the colonial name of the " Darting snake."

There is a species of Pseudonaja, found in North Western Australia, which is very venomous, and of a peculiar dark brown colour, approaching to black, which I consider is identical with this species. It is named the Australian Cobra Capella, or hooded snake, from having a mark on the back of the head similar to the Indian reptiles, but it does not seem to have any power of dilating the sides of the neck. It is generically distinct from the species so named in India. The snakes described as Pseudonaja textilis, and Diemansia Rubingi, are regarded by Mr. Krefft as both the young of the brown snake in different stages of growth, and on a careful examination of his specimens for the confirmation of this opinion, I consider his conclusions correct. A few months since I had an opportunity of examining an egg of a Panuchalis, then in the possession of Mr. Krefft, which contained a fully grown and well developed specimen of P. textilis. The snake named Pseudonaja textilis is a very beautiful reptile, with pretty black rings encircling its body. Mr. Krefft, who has closely observed this species, informs me that when it has attained the fourth year the rings are hardly perceptible and soon after disappear; but when seen in certain shades of light, remains of the circular bands may still be perceived, although very faint; but in dried specimens of this reptile the rings again become very distinct. The head and neck always remains of a dark colour. This species is oviparous.

The Red-capped snake (Brachysoma diadema).—This is a very pretty snake, and is pale brown above, with the head and neck black above, with a red spot on the back of the neck.

The Ringed Vermicella (Vermicella annulata.)—This is a very elegant marked snake, and is identical with that figured (No. 2) in White's journal. Many of the rare and undescribed snakes have been noticed and figured in White's Voyage to New South Wales, published in 1790, and attributed to Dr. Shaw, and a few to John Hunter. The Ringed Vermicella attains the length of from 2 to 2½ feet, and is ovo-viviparous. This and all the other snakes remain in a state of torpidity during the cold season—that is,

from May to the end of September.

By enabling surgeons and the public generally to distinguish the venomous from the non-venomous snakes the patients will be spared much suffering both mentally and bodily; for judging from reports of cases published in the newspapers, much suffering has been submitted to by patients, and thankfulness manifested for the success attending the treatment of the bite of a perfectly harmless snake. Many are ignorant of the fact that the fangs of poisonous reptiles, when broken, are soon reproduced; the poisonous fangs of the death-adder and other venomous snakes have been known to grow in from four to five weeks, and even in less time, after they had been broken. It is not improbable that Underwood died at Melbourne from the bite of a venomous snake, from his ignorance of this fact—no doubt supposing the snake he permitted to bite him had the poison fangs still remaining destroyed. The symptoms of poisoning by a venomous snake are a sharp pain in the part bitten which swells and inflammes, then becomes livid, cold and almost insensible. The dain and inflammation pursues the course of the lymphatics. The eyes are watery and inflamed. These symtoms are then followed by drowsiness, vomiting, pains over the region of the stomach, constriction of the chest and difficulty of respiration, and is succeeded by faintings, and colliquistive sweats, the pulse varies from small to hard, and intermittent, and death takes place in convulsions and excessive prostration.

When a person is bitten by a venomous snake, the first thing to be done is to apply a ligature immediately above the wound; for the bite being superficial, the poison is conveyed by the absorbents into the circulation; and great stress ought to be laid upon sucking the part. Celsus recommends the practice, observing that it is not only harmless to the person who sucks the wound, but will save the life of the wounded person. A slight incision will be of use by enlarging the punctured surfaces, and enabling the parts to be sucked with better effect. The poison evidently acts as a direct and powerful sedative, and those who are unfortunately under its influence frequently succumb to its depressing effect, and ammonia and other stimulants may be administered with advantage internally, the quantity being regulated according to the urgency indicated by the depressing symptoms, and the patient kept moving about to overcome the drowsiness. latter method I have before observed has been very judiciously adopted by the native blacks when treating the bites of venomous snakes. I should place no dependance on a poultice made of powdered ipecacuanha, as an application to the bites of poisonous snakes; but I have found it an efficacious remedy for the bites of centipedes, and stings of scorpions, and venomous insects. Some persons when bitten by the large "soldier ant" of this colony and other venomous insects, have immediately applied fresh earth to the injured part which has not only succeeded in alleviating the pain but produced a perfect cure in a very short period of time. An application of collodion may also be beneficial.

A short time since, in June, a Broad-headed snake (Hoplocephlaus variegatus) brought to the Anstralian Mnseum,was introduced into a compartment, which already had as immates a black snake (Pseudechys porphyriacus), the Ringed Vermicella (Vermicella annulata), the Redcapped snake (Brachysoma diedema), and the Whip snake (Diemansis reticulata), all very venomous. On entering, it became very savage, and seizing the whip snake by the head bit it through the brain and otherwise mutilated it, from the effects of which it died in a very short time (about two hours). To ascertain if it died from the influence of the poison, Mr. Krefft caused it to bite another snake, but the poison had no effect upon the reptile; indeed I have often observed that the poison of serpents does not appear to exercise any influence on one-another. The Broad-headed snake, after this little violence of temper, became quite tranquil, and settled down a peaceful member of the reptilian brigade exhibited in the Australian Museum in one glazed case, whilst a group of the pretty harmless snakes are shewn in another, as antagonistical emblems of the venomous and non-venomous species of the Australian snakes.

There are some genera of lizards so much resembling snakes as to be popularly considered to belong to that order of Reptilia. I may therefore, be excused giving some account of them and their distinctive characters, more especially as many persons considered they ought to have been included among the snakes, regarding them as of that tribe of reptilia. To the observer their form and movements are similar to serpents, as may be observed in the Silver snake—or Blind worm—of the colonists. On examination it will be found that some have two pair of rudimentary limbs, both extremely short, and in others they appear merely as flap-like appendages, or scaly tubercles. The form of the whole of the genera is elongated and snake-like. They are all perfectly harmless, like the class with which they are associated, for none of the lizard order of reptiles, although repulsive in appearance, are poisonous, although when caught they will inflict a severe bite upon their capturer, but only in self-defence. The genera of this class of lizards at present known in New South Wales have minute rudimentary limbs or flaps, but of little or no use as organs of locomotion, and some are deficient even of these. The general distinctive character of these reptiles is that the tongue is usually broad, free, covered with papilla, and notched in the front. The body is cylindrical, elongated, and serpent-like; the limbs are never greatly developed, and are sometimes wanting. The trunk blends with the head and tail without a distinct line of division, and is covered with scales. The shortness of the jaws and the small size of the mouth indicate their prey to be weak and minute. They differ also from snakes in having a short sternum or breastbone, scapulæ or shoulder blade-bones, and other anatomical characters only found appertaining to the lizard tribe of reptiles, and not those of snakes. Their places of retreat are usually the dense tangled masses of herbage, under heaps of decayed leaves and rotten wood, under stones, in hollow logs, or in holes in the ground.

There are three genera at present known inhabiting the colony of New South Wales. The first is well known to the colonists as the "Silver snake," "Blind worm," or "Glass snake." It is the Australian Anelios (Typhlops Priesii of Günther), which leads a worm-like existence in the soft ground. It is often found when dug out of the ground twisted into a knot, which takes some time and difficulty to unravel, and every effort appears as if it would break the fragile body of the creature during the process, as they wriggle and move about like earth-worms. The eyes are merely rudimentary, and are visible beneath the skin like little black dots. The tongue in this genus is long, extensible, and forked, although in other genera that organ is flat, or like an arrow-head in shape and form, with no notch at the end. The skin is smooth and shining, with a silver metallic reflection, imparts to those reptiles a singularly rich and brilliant appearance. Their habits are gentle and inoffensive. In colour this species is a greyish brown over the head, back, and indeed over the whole of the upper surface of the body; a white, or pale flesh colour, on the belly; and a shining, silvery hue is diffused over the whole of the skin of the reptile, from which circumstance it has received its colonial name of "Silver snake." It feeds on ants and ants eggs, and various other kinds of insects. It is from a foot to eighteen inches in length, but small in the circumference of the

The next genus is Lialis, of which two species are at present known in New South Wales. First, the Two-lined Lialis (Lialis bicatenata). It is found in holes in the ground, or under logs or stones. It is very active, and has fine, bright eyes. It combines the head of a lizard with the body of a snake. The whole of the upper part of the body is of a brownish grey colour, with a series of distant black spots (one the centre of each scale) along each side of the back; sometimes more or less distinct. The top of the head and nape, with an indistinct double band, forming an elongated loop, beneath blackish grey, whitish-dotted; chin and throat blackish, white spotted; lip shields brown. The length is from a foot to eighteen inches. 2nd. The Dotted Lialis (Lialis punctulata). It is of a brownish grey colour, very minutely black-dotted, beneath darker brownish grey, the two colours separated by a very narrow brown edge and a distinct white line; sides of the head and neck dark chocolate brown, edged above with a very narrow, and beneath by a broader, white band; front upper and side love labial plates white, the rest dark brown. Length, from a foot to twenty inches. The flut tongue of these reptiles may often be seen when they protude it to lick their jaws.

The next the Pygopus (Pygopus lepidopedus), is a very lively and active reptile, and may be often seen running about on sunny days very numerous in the sandy scrubs in the environs of Sydney. The upper portion of the body is of a light reddish-brown, with a shade of grey towards the side, abdomen bluish with a tinge of pink, running into a pale-yellow near the neck and under the head. Scales lighter edged. Twelve rows of keeled scales on the back. They are also found under logs of trees, in hellow stumps, and under stones. The length is from one to two feet, but small in the circumference of the body.

In conclusion to these remarks on the snakes of New South Wales it may be mentioned that Nature has so ordained it, that to keep these reptiles within due bounds, there are several birds indigenous to New South Wales whose office is to kill and devour snakes and other reptiles. The laughing Kingfisher (Dacelo gigantea) and several of the rapacious birds among which Jardine's Harrier (Circus Jardinü) and the Orange speckled hawk of the colonists (Ieracidea Berigora) are very conspicuous in the fulfilment of this duty, and annually destroy an incredible number of snakes, lizards, grubs and caterpillars, as well as the smaller kinds of mammalia, and their offices ought to be regarded as highly beneficial to mankind keeping within proper limits the increase of these creatures. The Orange speckled hawk, although feeding upon reptiles, (and when they are scarce, upon small birds,) is well known not to confine itself to that kind of food only, but commits great havoc among the myriads of caterpillars which at some seasons of the year are very destructive to vegetation, infesting certain districts (as the Upper Hunter) in multitudes, and producing great devastation among the crops.

Another Australian bird that destroys snakes is the Œdienemus or stone

Another Australian bird that destroys snakes is the Œdicnemus or stone curlew, great plover or thick knee; it is very common, and is readily domesticated. Its usual food is worms, slugs, frogs and insects, and as it is a night bird, its large, full eyes enables it to discern the small animals or insects which issue forth from their lurking places at duek of the evening or at night. But in a domesticated state it has been seen to kill and devour snakes and other reptiles, and also mice.

There are several birds natives of other countries equally destructive to reptiles, that may be introduced with advantage into this colony. The first is the secretary bird of Southern Africa which will be both valuable and useful to introduce into Australia. The secretary bird or serpent eater (Secretarius reptilivorus) is a singular bird, combining the character of the birds of prey, with some part of the organisation of the waders, but approximating more to the former than the latter class. It is invaluable from feeding almost exclusively on snakes, seeking out and destroying them; and when that kind of food fails, it captures and devours others of the reptilian order, such as frogs, toads, lizards and young tortoises. It is ordinary height is three feet. It is a grey leaden color, with the breast yellowish white, the cere and regions of the eyes naked and yellow. The crest lies down on the hind part of the neck, and from its fanciful resemblence to pens stuck behind a clerk's car, as given to it the name it bears of the secretary bird. On its native plains it may be seen stalking with a staid military step, but when alarmed runs with great rapidity, and at last when pressed hard takes to flight.

They are readily tamed when young, in which state and not the adult it would be desirable to introduce them into this colony, and I am informed by my friend Mr. Edgar L. Layard, (residing at the Cape of Good Hope, and distinguished as a naturalist by his researches in the Ornithology of Ceylon) who recently visited Sydney, that these birds could be readily procured at the Cape.

The secretary birds are domesticated by the inhabitants of the Cape district, to keep them free from venomous and other reptiles, which are very numerous, and many are as deadly venomous in that country, as in the colony of New South Wales. Every effort is made in the Cape colony to prevent the destruction of these useful birds, and a fine is imposed on any person destroying them. When attacking serpents, they make great use of their powerful feet and beak, similar to other birds of prey. From the similarity of the climate of the Cape colony to that of New South Wales, these valuable birds could very readily be naturalised, and there would be no difficulty in providing them with an abundance of their natural food.

There is another bird, a native of the Brazils, which is as great an enemy to the serpent tribe as the secretary bird of Southern Africa. It is the Cariama (Dicholophus cristatus), which is said to form a link between the waders and gallinaceous birds. It is found very numerous in the provinces of the interior of Brazil, and are usually seen in flock s of from ten to twenty on the look out for reptiles. When a small snake is seen, the first bird of the flock that perceives it, darts upon, kills and devours it; but should the snake be too large for one bird to destroy, the whole troop make an attack, forming a circle round it, and each bird darts upon it until the reptile is destroyed. These birds are readily domesticated, and from the accounts related of them, and published in the journal of the Acclimatization Society of Paris, they would be a useful bird to introduce into the colony of New South Wales, and appear from description to resemble very much in their habits of domestication the native companion (Grus Antigone) of Australia.

The Peacock has been mentioned as a bird destructive to snakes, and feeding abundantly upon these reptiles. I doubt the fact, as I never observed the peacock attack or devour snakes during my residence in Ceylon, in which island a species of that magnificient bird is indigenous and numerous, nor has it been remarked in other countries where the peacock has been naturalised. For instance, some pea-fowls reared in New South Wales by Mr. F. O'Brien at Bondi, near Sydney, on the contrary evinced great fear of snakes, and the presence of these reptiles near them was known by the birds uttering their peculiar shrill cry; and it was then ascertained that when any of these birds found themselves in close proximity to a snake, the sound of alarm was raised by the uttering of a loud hoarse cry, followed by sharp, grating notes, and which was repeated by all their companions within hearing.

When any one attracted by the cry approached the spot, the pea fowls would be seen in great distress with ruffled feathers, and uttering their shrill screams, would encircle the snake at a certain distance, or the hole or bush in which the reptile had taken refuge. They have been seen in this manner surrounding the death adder or any other venomous snake, on a lawn near the house, keeping at the same time at a distance of three or four feet from the reptile, the birds having their necks extended and feathers ruffled as if to frighten the reptile away; and they do not leave it until it has been either scared away, and does not re-appear, or is killed by some person attracted to the spot by the cries of the birds; but they have never been seen in any instance to peck or jump at it as if to destroy the reptile. For many years more than twenty peacocks have been reared and preserved at Bondi by Mr. F. O'Brien, and he informs me that they have never been known to attack a living snake or devour a dead one; and he also observed that one of the reasons he had for keeping so many pea-fowls was that their cry of alarm attracted attention to the presence of a snake on the grounds.

AUSTRALIAN EXPLORATION.

HISTORICAL SKETCH

OF THE PROGRESS OF

INLAND DISCOVERY IN AUSTRALIA,

BY

FREDERICK S. PEPPERCORNE, C.C.L.

PART III. Continued from 1862.

67.—It is impossible now to ignore the fact, that something more than a numerous party, well appointed and equipped, and with a heavy train of horses and baggage, is necessary for the successful exploration of the interior of Australia. Old explorers are well aware that cumbrous baggage, in a rough country, destitute perhaps of water, is an impediment rather than an advantage, owing to the difficulty of transporting it. Let it be remembered that sixteen years back, Dr. Leichhardt performed the difficult task of traversing the Australian Continent from the Darling Downs to Port Essington (a distance of nearly 3,000 miles) with a party consisting of only seven persons, and having 17 horses and 2 kangaroo dogs, and with a very limited supply of dried beef, flour, tea and sugar.

68.—Mr Stuart's party consisted only of himself and two others, and these three men, visited and re-visited twice the centre of the Continent; they advanced from that centre, in various directions, and were only prevented by hostile tribes of natives, from accomplishing the task they had imposed upon themselves, of reaching the Northern or the north-west coast. They are now far away on their final journey, and will, no doubt, before these lines are penned, have successfully accomplished their undertaking.

69.—If we turn to the expedition conducted by Mr. Burke, with a large and well appointed party, and with a numerous train of horses and camels, the result is certainly disheartening. It is believed, however, that Mr. Burke, the leader, is not to be charged with the unfortunate result of this expedition, but rather that it was in the original planning and fitting out the party, in Melbourne. On the actual exploration, only Burke and three men were engaged, taking with them 6 camels and 1 horse, and 3 months rations, for the journey to the gulf of Carpentaria, and back to Cooper's creek. Mr. Burke reached the Gulf of Carpentaria in February, 1861, and remained three days on the Albert River. He returned by the same route to Cooper's creek, and reached the depôt he had left there on the 21st April.

70 .- By a most unfortunate circumstance he found that Mr. Brahe, whom he had left in charge of the camp at Cooper's creek, with 4 men and provisions, had departed on the morning of his arrival on the 21st April, owing to his men being overcome with sickness and privations, -and was then retracing his steps to "Menindie," near the Darling. Being too much exhausted to follow, Mr. Burke determined after a few days rest, to make for South Australia, his party being now reduced to three men, Mr. Gray having died on the road from exhaustion. After making three ineffectual attempts, Mr. Burke returned to Cooper's creek for the last time, and died from starvation at the end of June; King who was with him at the time of his death, then returned to Wills, whom he found dead in a "gunyah."

He then remained with the natives who were friendly, and who supplied him with some food until discovered by Mr. Howitt's party.

71.—Mr. Burke, and the leaders of the several exploring parties from South Australia, as well as those sent from Victoria, in search of Mr. Burke, all speak of the country to the north and west of the Darling, as being of a nature very little different from that already occupied, and as being equally fit for the settlement; and the extensive district lying between Cooper's creek and the Darling is described as being a fine pastoral country, and capable of maintaining a large population, its great distance from the sca-board, being its only essential drawback. Uncertainty as to the existence of permanent water, has been the chief cause why this large belt of land has so long remained in obscurity; but making every allowance for the season of the year, and the wetness of the season which would, of course, give to the country its best appearance, there is still sufficient assurance that this district is of a very promising character. It is described as being good grazing country, with an abundance of creeks and lagoons, which appear to contain a permanent supply of water.

72.-If we turn to the published reports of Messrs. Walker and Landsborough, it will be seen that the latter gentleman found no difficulty whatever in making his way from the Gulf of Carpentaria to the Victoria river, and from thence to Fort Bourke, on the Darling, and he describes the country through which he passed, as being well watered and grassed. To use his own words:—"I was delighted, on getting to the Gulf, to see such "good country,—one of the finest pastoral countries I have ever witnessed. "It is about twenty years since I arrived in Victoria, and since then I never "saw better country for stock, than I saw at the Gulf of Carpentaria. "In my first expedition I went through a fine country, following up the "running streams for 150 miles in a south-west direction, intending to go to "Stuart's farthest. In the country I found a fine spring by following up a "river to its source. In this expedition, though the horses had little rest, "and although they had undergone so much privation (on ship board) yet "so good was the country that the horses travelled as well, as though they "had been stable fed."

73.—"On my return to the depôt, we rested the horses for three weeks, "and then we started to go in search of the tracks of Burke. We heard that "his tracks had been seen by Walker on the Flinder's river, but although "he had only preceded us by about two months, so much rain had fallen, that we found it was impossible to follow up his tracks. Though we "could not find his traces, we followed the river up for about 400 miles, "through a magnificent country. After this, the country became somewhat hilly, and then the channel of the river was more defined. The bed of "the river was about 120 yards wide."

74.-Mr. Landsborough's route from the Gulf of Carpentaria. Mr.

Gregory's route to South Australia, and Mr. Walker's route in the same direction, demonstrate the fact that there is a large extent of fine country in the north; and that sheep, cattle and horses, can be taken at a small cost, and in the finest condition, from South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales, and the inland districts of Queensland, to stock the country near the Gulf of Carpentaria. But there exists one drawback which is the want of a good harbour and shipping port in the Gulf. It is true that there are the Leichhardt and other rivers, emptying themselves into the Gulf, and that the "Firefly," a vessel of 200 tons, went up the river for about 20 miles, but a commodious harbour is not to be found. This desideratum can not in fact be said to exist between the Cape York Peninsula, and the Cobourg Peminsula, on which the fine harbour of Port Essington is situated.

75.—As this noble harbour will no doubt, at some future day, become an important commercial station, rivalling Sydney and Melbourne, owing to its close proximity to India, China, the southern parts of Asia, and the islands of the Eastern Archipelago, some notice of it may not be considered misplaced.

In a letter from Sir Gordon Bremer to Lord Stanley, dated January 2nd, 1842, Sir Gordon says:—" By reference to the map, it will be seen that the geographical position of Port Essington, is one of peculiar character as "regards the rapidly increasing intercourse between New South Wales and India. Forming a projecting point, it approaches within 450 miles of the Molucca Islands, and the valuable possessions of the Dutch in that quarter. Timor is only 240 miles distant; Batavia about 1000. As a "military position, I regard Port Essington, as exceedingly valuable; it possesses a harbour, perhaps unequalled, certainly not excelled by any is "the world: a rise and fall of tide of 13 feet render it available for docks, for vessels of large size, or for heaving them down. To the eastward, there is another harbour, to which the discoverers gave my name (Port Bremer). If Port Essington did not exist, this harbour would be called good. One mile and a half of grassy flat country, divides these harbours. "Perhaps there is not a more splendid sheet of water to be found than the port itself. The French circumnavigator, Admiral D'Urville, was struck with astonishment, and pronounced it a 'superb basin.'"

76.—F.om Sir Gordon Bremer's reports to the Admiralty, respecting Port Essington, we learn various particulars. Thus, we are told that the deep-water anchorage under Point Record alone, would contain twenty-five sail of the line; that the inner harbour would supply anchorage for 500 merchantmen, while the outer anchorage would contain the whole British navy. With regard to the climate, Sir Gordon expresses his opinion that it is equal to any tropical one in the world. Plantains, bananas, orange, lemon and tamarind trees flourish luxuriantly, and the growth of the sugar cane is said to be astonishing: while cotton succeeds as well as could be wished. Rice may also be cultivated extensively. The Malay "proas" resort there to procure trepang, or beche-le-mer, and we are informed by Macculloch, that from Celebes alone, no less than forty vessels go annually for this purpose to the north-west coast of Australia.

77.—All these facts shew that, eventually, Port Essington will form the capital of Northern Australia, chiefly from its advantageous position. The introduction of the sugar-cane, the coffee shrub, the tea-plant, the peppermint, the clove, the nutmeg-tree, besides all kinds of spices, the most valuable oils, and the most delicious tropical fruits, will only be a question of time; for it is unquestionable that the whole of these may easily be naturalized in tropical Australia; and no one can predict to what enormous proportions, the export trade of Australia will extend, whenever its primary and pressing want, viz., that of population, is adequately supplied from other countries.

78.—Every month adds something to our knowledge of the resources and capabilities of Australia, and assists in dissipating the delusion, that it is the sea-coast only which is habitable, and that the whole of the interior is a desert. The explorations of Messrs. Gregory in the north-west, of Messrs. Stuart and Goyder in the centre, and of the agents of the Queensland government, in the north-east part of this Continent, go far to overthrow all the old theories on the subject, and restrict within continually narrowing, limits, that desolate Sahara which was once supposed to over-spread the greater portion of New Holland. Tracts of country as large as some European kingdoms, are being opened up for settlement, and the nothat Australia is destitute of large rivers, is exploded by recent explorers.

79.—Much of the most fertile land in Eastern Australia, lies on the 79.—Much of the most fertile land in Eastern Australia, lies on the banks of the rivers, formed by successive alluvial deposits; the soil is of surpassing richness, and though subject to inundation, it is always preferred by the agriculturist. Hence the chief agricultural lands in the colony of New South Wales, are situated on the Richmond, the Clarence, the Macleay, the Hastings, the Mauning and the Hunter rivers, to the north of Sydney, and the upper part of Shoalhaven river, Ulladulla, the Clyde, the Moruya, the Belloury and Bermaguee rivers to the south. In Queensland, an extensive tract of agricultural country exists between the river Burdekin and the sea. That noble watercourse, which is now ascertained to be second only to the Murray, in magnitude and volume, runs parallel with the eastern coast for several hundreds of miles, at a variable distance of from 50 to 70 miles, and a commodious harbour has been found at Edgecumbe Bay, affording an outlet for the produce of the southern portion of this new country, which extends as far north as the "Bellenden Ker" Hills.

this new country, which extends as far north as the "Bellenden Ker" Hills. 80.—Now with such rivers as the Burdekin, the Fitzroy, the Burnett, the Mary and others, the colony of Queensland cannot be said to be destitute of navigable rivers, nor need the settlers be harrassed by any serious apprehensions of drought, as within the tropics, in Australia, the rain generally sets in about the beginning of the year, and continues often to the end of April. The numerous Bays with which the coast is indented, will afford every facility for the shipment of wool, tallow and hides &c.; and with the slow but certain increase of population, and the accumulation of capital, fresh sources of wealth will spring up by the introduction of those products which flourish most luxuriantly in a tropical region. Already the enterprising squatter has pushed his flocks and herds as far as the "plains of promise" which occupy the Southern shore of the Gulf of Carpentaria, between the meridians of 139 deg. and 141 deg. of east longitude and extending a little beyond lat. 18 deg. 10 min. south, so that the occupation of this new country may now be said to be an accomplished fact.

81.—With respect to Central Australia, and to that remarkable depression called "Lake Torrens," or the Torrens "basin," which Captain Stuart's observation, placed considerably below the level of the sea, it appears to be simply a large valley of denudation, which has been excavated by the drainage of the surface water, through a long course of ages, of which process that solitary watercourse called the Barcoo, or Victoria river, has been the principal agent. The apparently slight inclination of the bed of the Lake towards the sea, may be taken as an evidence that the course of the waters which originally excavated this extensive basin, was a long one,—such, in fact as would be afforded by the Victoria river, whose sources are about 1100 miles from the head of Spencer's Gulf, which appears formerly to have been its embouchure. Its upper part was first discovered in the moist and broken mountainous district below the tropic of Capricorn, by Sir. T. Mitchell, and its broad reaches might there float a steamer; but lower down, its channel can hardly be distinguished in the sandy plains through which it flows, till it disembogues in Lake Torrens.

82.—In the central part of Australia, as far as he penetrated, Captain Stuart found abundant signs of water. He mentions dry plains, which had evidently, at some previous time, been under water, and he crossed numerous creeks and watercourses, almost always quite dry, and which seemed to rise in one plain, only to spread over and terminate in another plain. The basin of lake Torrens is universally described as consisting on the outer edges of fine sand, and of a dark muddy soil as the water is approached. That the flow of water through this basin is occasionally considerable is shewn by the nature of its bed, and in reading Eyre's account of his expidition to Mount Hopeless, he repeatedly describes "table topped" hills as being visible in the plain of Lake Torrens, its basin, near Mount Eyre, being from 15 to 20 miles across. These peculiarly shaped hills, with steep precipitous sides, in a level plain, afford strong evidences of being the result of the violent action of water, continued doubtless, at intervals, during many successive ages.

83.—It must always be borne in mind, that the parched and sterile aspect of any district, is no index of what it may become during the periods of those irregular and excessive rains, which seem to occur in every part of Australia. A feeble stream meandering through parched plains, becomes, in the wet season, a formidable river carrying a vast body of water, with driftwood to the sea, and occasional heavy floods occur in nearly every known river in Australia. The rivers of north-west Australia much resemble those of the south-eastern part of the Continent; they rise at no very great distance from the sea; near their sources, they are mountain torrents; but in the low lands, they become generally streams with slow currents, winding through fertile and extensive plains, which are subject to sudden and terrific inundations.

84.—In Northern Australia are several considerable rivera, of which the "Victoria" (No. 2) the "South Alligator," the Leichhardt," the "Flinders" and the "Albert" are the principal ones. The "Albert" is described being a wide river, navigable for vessels of large tonnage, and having a considerable rise of tide, at its entrance. But according to Mr. Gregory, "the country around the Gulf of Carpentaria, does not offer any great "inducement to the settler, being devoid of good harbours; the rivers are "only accessible for small vessels, while the available country bears but a "small proportion to that which is utterly worthless." (Report par. 64.)

85.—Mr. Gregory also records his opinion that the whole of the plains at the head of the Gulf, seem to result from the gradual recession of the waters of the Gulf. (par. 54.) Now this inference is certainly not borne out by fact, since no fact is better established than that of the permanence of the mean level of the ocean, in all parts of the globe; but, on the other hand, it has been demonstrated by the most unequivocal proofs, since the time of Strabo, to our own, that Continents are inconstant in their level.

86.—The appearance of the country at the head of the Gulf, would no doubt seem to show that the Ocean had formerly stood at a higher level, and that its waters had slowly and tranquilly sunk down; and this appearance, no doubt, led Mr. Gregory to suppose that the waters of the Gulf had receded; whereas the fact no doubt is, that a gradual and insensible elevation of the land, on a large scale, is going on, in the neighbourhood of the Gulf, which is itself, no doubt, gradually being filled and nendered shallow by the immense quantities of alluvium deposited in it from the various rivers which disembogue on its shores.

87.—Supposing that a gradual and insensible elevation of the land is going on in Australia, (a supposition which is shared in by geologists) this would account for many singular features both on the coast and in the interior of Australia. That "plutonic" action, or the volcanic agency operating under pressure, and at great depths, has excited powerful influence in certain parts of the Continent, is evident from the frequent disruptions and dislocations of the strata; but whether this action was more energetic during remote periods, and that it has since been on the decline, or whether, as in the case of the Scandinavian peninsula, the action has been productive of a gradual and imperceptible rise of the strata, up to the present time, are points which our Australian geologists have not as yet decided.

88.—That the whole Continent has undergone changes in its general features and character, since the period of its being the abode of man, no one can doubt. The rapid streams and rivers flowing from the adjacent Cordillera, bring down with them immense quantities of alluvium; and this being dispersed and spread out in the ocean's bed, become flats which extend for miles seaward, and partially block up the mouths of the various rivers which disembegue on the eastern coast. The same action taking place on the northern coast, and in the Gulf of Carpentaria, gives the appearance of vast wacts of land gained from the sea, while near the coast in that locality, the land is generally low, and shand it is alternate swamp and grass, with level plains of boundless extent. These deposits are doubtless very extensive in a country where the tsopical rains are so heavy.

89.—With regard to the hydrographical features of Ametralia, these may, with some few exceptions, be now said to be snown, but there appears to b one portion of the north-west coast, in the neighbourhood of Cygnet and Camden bays, respecting which we have no definite information. The late Admiral King, when exploring this part of the coust in 1821, observed, while at anchor in Camden bay, (near which was a considerable opening,) that the tides rose and fell 37 feet perpendicular. A few days afterwards, being in Collier's bay, where the land was very much broken in character, the tide fell 36 feet, and the coast appeared to be rauch intersected with straits and deep channels. On the 26th August 1821, being in Recbuck bay, (lat. 18 deg. 29 min. S.) Capt King again adverts to the remarkable rise of tide, and expresses his opinion that there must be some reason for the great indraught into the Bight between Cape Villaret and Point Gautheaume.

90.—In the mouth of February, 1822, Capt. King revisited Cygnet bay, and standing into the opening in which it is situated, commenced a more careful examination. The same indications are observed upon the same remarkable rise and strength of the tides, which had excited his own attention a few months previously; from a point in the opening, called "Point Cunningham," in lat. 15 deg. 39 min. S. the group of islands to the eastward was observed to extend no further to the south than the bearing of north 88 deg. east. Beyond this was an open sea. In attempting to prosecute the further investigation of this opening, Capt. King had the misfortune to lose his anchors, and being reduced to one only, was obliged to leave the coast.

91.—In his appendix, under the head of "sailing directions," Capt. King "again remarks respecting Cygnet bay:— From all that is at present "known of this remarkable opening, there is enough to excite the greatest "interest, since from the extent of the opening, the rapidity of the stream, "and the great rise and fall of the tides, there must be a very extensive "gulf or opening, totally different from every thing that has before been "seen. There is also reason to suspect that the land between Cape "Leveque and Point Gauthenume is also an island, and if so, the mouth of "this opening is eight sailes wide: besides who is to say that the land of "Cape Villaret (lat. 18 deg. 18 min. S.) may not also be an island?"

92.—Such therefore is Captain King's account (of coarse, very much abridged), of this remarkable inlet. Who is to say that it may not be the outlet of that inland sea, which Mr. Stuart discovered on his last journey into the interior? The probabilities appear to be in faver of this supposition; and both the conjecture of Dampier, who in 1699, was in both Cygnet and Roebuck bays, and that of Captain King, as to the existence of a large and deep inlet, between the 16th and 20th degrees of south latitude, remain to this day undetermined by actual investigation. The honour of England demands that she be not forestalled in the complete developement of the hydrographical features of a country which she has made her own: the interests of her rising colonies in the east, west, and south of this great Continent, require that her inhabitants be made acquainted with the nature of her territorial features,—and the voice of Science asks from the Government the solution of geographical questions of such great interest.

OUR COAL FIELDS.

By W. KEEKE, Government Examiner of Coal Fields.

The time has come to place on record the rapid developement of our coalfields. Ten years ago we had only one company of any importance at work, and only one horse tramway for the conveyance of coals to the shipping. Now we have tramways and locomotives from a dozen collieries, and the extraction has increased from 67,000 tons per annum to more than a thousand tons per day, or over $60,000 tons per annum; and we are confident that the more our coals are known the greater will be the demand.

When last year we were about to send our contributions to the International Exhibition, the Lords of the Admiralty offered to institute trial experiments at Woolwich to settle the question as to the value of our coals, provided that not less than two tons were sent from each colliery. Our commissioners entrusted to the examiner of coal fields the task of collecting fair samples from each colliery, and to show how this task was executed, we cannot do better than publish Mr. Keene's letter addressed to the commissioners, as it has been published in the London Catalogue of the International Exhibition, and in which will be found very interesting details of our various collieries.

This letter of the Examiner was accompanied by a geological collection, and a copy of Sir Thomas Mitchell's well known map coloured geologically so far as the country had been examined by Mr. Keene up to that time—as well as a section of about two hundred miles from Muswellbrook in the north to Gunning, and the head of the Lachlan, near Yass on the south road. We have the authority of Sir Daniel Cooper, and our London Commissioners for stating that this collection, map, and sections received unqualified praise from Sir Roderick Murchison, Sir Edward Logan, Mr. Sopwith, Mr. Warrington Smythe, and the many men of science who examined them, and the jurors awarded a medal " for the persevering labour shown in this work."

In due course the experiments were made by the Admiralty, and a somewhat complicated tabular statement of the results, signed by Mr. C. H. Pennell, Chief Clerk, was published in the Sydney Papers in the month of September.

The examiner of coal fields took, and, we think very properly, this complicated table, and reduced the experiments to an average, thus expressing the results in the most simple form, as appended below.

* Average results of the trials of Australian coals, compared with the average of English north-country coals.

^{1.} The Woolwich apparatus or boiler, which, with average English northcountry coal evaporated at the rate of forty seven cubic feet of water per hour, with average Australian coal evaporated forty-six and three-quarter cubic feet, or a hundred and eighty-eighth part less in the same time of one

One pound of English north-country coal evaporated 8.25 lbs or 84 lbs. of water; and one pound of Australian coal evaporated 8.258 lbs.

being a small fraction more than a pound of English coal.

3. The average of the English coal gives 1 per cent, of clinker; the Australian, 2.11 per cent., or rather more than double.

Mr. Keene shows that according to the Admiralty Report itself, "Australian coal excels average English north country coal in power of "evaporation; for one pound of our coal evaporates more water than a "pound of English coal;" and the result is that the Lords of the Admiralty have given orders that our coal shall be used in her Majesty's ships on the stations here; so that we see before us a large amount of prospersoccupation, and investment for capital in the working of our coal fields.

Letter addressed by Mr. W. Keene, the Examiner of Coal-fields, to the Commissioners of New South Wales for the International Exhibition of 1862.

Having been honoured by you with copy of the communication from the Lords of the Admiralty, stating that their lordships had granted permission for the institution of a series of experiments in Her Majesty's Dock-yards, with a view of testing the relative heating powers of the different varieties of the Australian mineral as compared with each other as well as with British coal:

And further informed of the wish of their lordships, that to secure this important object, and to render the results as little liable to error as possible, no specimen would be forwarded weighing less than two tons, I addressed a Circular to the proprietors of the principal collieries in work, and they readily accepted their lordships' offer. Two tons or more, of fair round hand-picked coal has been supplied, properly packed, by each colliery, under my inspection, and shipped with the other exhibits for London.

The Australian Agricultural Company send two tons from their mine known as the Bore-Hole Colliery. The seam is 163 feet from the surface, and 150 feet below the sea level; its greate 1 thickness about 9 feet, with average dip to the south-east of 1 in 20. This coal is greatly esteemed in the Melbourne and Californian markets. Ships of large tonnage can load at the staiths of the company, to which the coal is taken from the pit's mouth by locomotives, a distance of about two miles.

The same company send also two tons from their F pit, situated on the hill side at Newcastle, and in which, at 90 feet below the surface, the coal known as the Yard Seam, and visible on the coast at the sea level, is worked. For many years this was the only coal wrought by the Australian Agricultural Company. It is rather soft in quality, but esteemed for household purposes, gas manufacture, and blacksmiths' work. These coals are also taken to the wharf by locomotives. The company frequently

4. Of ash, the average of English coal is 4 per cent, against 7:15 per cent for Australian; and of ash and clinker together, the English coal is stated to give 5 per cent., whilst our own leaves 91 per cent.

6. The quantity of residue or ash to be thrown away is of little consequence when the evaporative power of the coals is so equal.

We may fairly assume that the English coal as supplied to Woolwich has attained its highest average, whilst the coal of Australia is an improving average.

^{5.} We thus see that average Australian coal excels average English north-country coal in power of evaporation; for one pound of our coal evaporates more water than a pound of English coal; and in time, that is to say the evaporation per hour, the difference against us is so insignificant as not to be worth attention.

ahipe 500 tons a day, and can readily supply larger demands. Price 14s. 6d per ton.

The Newcastle Coal and Copper Company send two tons from their Colliery, working what is known as the Burwood Seam. This coal is seen in natural section on the cliffs of the sen-coast, 60 feet above the sea level, and has been worked into by day-levels in the Burwood range of hills near Newcastle. The two tons sent are from a new drift just spened in the hill known as Little Red-Head, and the coal is the same seam as that of the Burwood range. Between the two workings there appears a down-throw fault of more than 60 feet. The sample is taken from the top and middle of the seam.

Top coal ... 2 ft. 6 in. | Clay band ... 2 in | Fire-clay parting | 3 in. | Bottom coal ... 3 ft. 6 in. | Middle coal ... 2 ft. 3 in. |

This coal is easily worked, and carried by locomotives to the shipping wharves of Newcastle, at the rate of 500 tons per day. Price 13s. 6d. per ton.

The Wallsend Company send two tons from what is known as the Wallsend seam. The coal in this pit is 127 feet from the surface, and 80 feet below the sea level; 9 feet 10 inches in thickness, including partings, which divide the seam into three bands. The partings are together about 10 inches in thickness. The two tons sent are an average mixture from toy, middle, and bottom portions of the seam. The Wallsend workings are situated about half-way between Minmi and Newcastle, the stratz rising towards the North West ranges. The works connect with Newcastle by a branch railway to join the Great Northern Line at Waratah, about four miles from this port, and the locomotives take coals to the ship's side at the wharf at the rate of 500 tons or more daily. Price 14s. 6d per ton. This colliery has not been long opened, and the coal finds favour in the markets of Melbourne and California.

The Minmi Colliery Company send two tons from their C pit. The seam is 90 feet from the surface, and 20 feet above the sea level. An outcrop of the seam is visible in a creek about 400 yards from the shaft, rising in a northerly direction I in 18. It appears to be the second seam below the chert rock which covers the Coal and Copper Company's seam at Burwood, and is bedded on a hard sandstone grit of good building stone. The coal is much liked by the blacksmiths of the district, and the small makes a good coke, as does the small coal of the collileries of the Newcastle district generally. Messrs. J. and A. Brown, the owners of these mines, raise about 300 tons a day, which is shipped at Hexham, a township on the banks of the Hunter River, 10 miles from Newcastle; or the coal is sent down in barges laden with boxes, which are hoisted by a steam crane so as to load ships of any tonnage whilst at anchor in the stream. The seam averages 6 feet of clean coal, such as the two tons sent.

The Tomago Company have put down a shaft 365 feet to the coal—the deepest as yet in New South Wales. They first struck a seam 6 feet thick at a depth of 342 feet, but finding a thinner seam of better quality 23 feet lower, they preferred to work this "Long-wall," and they supply from 100 to 150 tons daily of what is esteemed a good furnace coal. The pit is on a level at a distance of only 700 yards from the river bank, where vessels of 300 tons can take in their load. The Company has been lately reorganized, and is preparing for operations on a more extended scale. This coal is highly bituminous, and remarkable in common with the Bore-hole and Minmi seams for its tendency to reniform and orbicular fracture-a posu-Biarrity which appears to belong to the middle seams of the series, the upper and lower seams being more disposed to splinty cleavage, and burning to ash with little cinder.

The Four-Mile Creek Company, Means. Christian, Nixon, and Co., carries on its operations in the East Maitland District, near to the head of the navigation of the Hunter River, 15 railes from Newcastle. There are at least three seams recognisable in this district, and that worked is 8 feet 6 inches in thickness, 5 feet 6 inches of which is a splint coal of very superior quality, chiefly used by the two lines of steamers navigating daily between Morpeth and Sydney.

The admirable regularity with which these ocean steamers perform their service—their engines of 160 horse-power easily kept to the top of their speed with steam to spare, and blowing at the valve, give sufficient and constant evidence of the excellence of the coal; in fact, I have long coasidered, and often expressed the opinion that good, clean, hand-picked New South Wales coal is at least equal, if not preferable to the best coals of England, when these latter have been twice transhipped; that is to say, in the state in which English coal can alone be got in Sydney, and at double the price of the best produce of our own mines.

The Four-Mile Creek is a hard splint coal, does not clinker, and burns to a fine dry ash-is very comparable to the coals shipped from Goole, in Yorkshire; whilst our bituminous coals may be likened in quality to the

" Hartley."

Descending the strata, and below all the seams of these collieries, at West Maitland, about five miles north from Four-Mile Creek, two seams of cannel and splinty coal are worked, the property of the Hon. Bourne Russell, specimens of which may be seen in compartment No. 22 of the Geological Collection in the Exhibition.

As this cannel coal is most useful, and is chiefly employed for domestic purposes, the proprietor has considered it needless to send it to be tested as Thirty miles farther to the northward, at Rix's Creek, near Singleton, a seam of good coal is worked, of which a sample will be found in compartment No. 15, and this concludes the collection from the Northern District.

Sixty miles south from Sydney are the Ports of Bellambi and Wollongong; and though they cannot be compared for accommodation with the Port of Newcastle, the energy of the coal owners, and the facility with which coals can be worked by "day-levels" from a seven-feet seam, which shows itself in section along many miles of the mountain range, assure to this field a progressive development to prove the inexhaustible resources of New South Wales in mineral fuel; and will be a guarantee to commercial interests that no combination or monopoly can long disturb the regularity of the supply.

At Bellambi, vessels load from a jetty the coals brought down the mountain side along a tramway to the ship, and from 100 to 200 tens are thus sent away daily.

At Wellongong there is a like arrangement for the Mount Keira Mine, and like quantities are shipped from that Port. Each of these collieries send two tons of coal to be tested.

There is a day-level worked by a mining party between Mr. Hale's Bellambi Mine and Mount Keira. A drift is also making into the seam four miles south of Dapto, and more than 20 miles south from Mr. Hale's; whilst five miles north from Mr. Hale's, a tramway is in course of construction to Bellambi, for a company about to be incorporated by Act of the New South Wales Parliament, and named the Bulli and Bellambi Coal Mining Company. Coals would have been sent from this latter, had there not been some impediment to their carriage to the ship just at this time, from the preparations for the railway works.

I have examined all these new drifts, both at the extreme north and south points at which the seam has hitherto been opened, at heights varying from 500 to 600 feet above the level of the sea, at a distance of at least 25 miles from each other, and can say that the coals appear equally good with those from the drifts in work—all upon the same seam, and showing a great regularity of thickness of about 7 feet.

Besides this, and 15 miles nearer to Sydney, at Coal Cliff, I found a seam at the level of low water, 6 feet in thickness, very like to the splint coal of Four-Mile Creek; and this seam will probably, from its apparent good quality, soon be worked.

On approaching Sydney from the Coal Cliff, there is a sudden fall in the strata, showing a downthrow of more than 1000 feet, so that there would be little chance of meeting with coal at Sydney without going through the whole series of sandstones which cover the coal measures, and which we know from exposed sections to be about 1000 feet in thickness.

[We learn that since writing the above, Mr. Keene has reported that the Coal Seams will be found on the Sydney side of the range, which divides Wollongong from Sydney (and at a moderate depth,) at the Head of Port Hacking creek, South of the down-throw, and nearly on the Sydney level.]

Inland, and to the west from Wollongong, these same seams rise "to-day" 2000 feet above the level of the sea at the Fitzroy Iron Mines, at Black Bob's Creek, and near to the Hanging Rock on the Southern Road. At this last place I laid bare a 7-feet seam of coal only a few weeks ago; and it is from here that Goulburn, one of our largest inland towns, where wood for fuel is already a very costly item in steam power, will get supplied. The finest magnetic iron ore, and limestone, abound in close proximity to each other in the vicinity of Goulburn, and the completion of the railway, which will pass close to the Hanging Rock, at 25 miles from Goulburn, will bring together these valuable raw materials—coal, iron, and limestone.

I have to acknowledge the ready compliance of the various companies and coal owners with the request made by me on behalf of the Lords of the Admiralty, and testify that the coals sent are from the different collieries indicated.

Since the year 1856, the trade of the old companies has nearly doubled, whilst new companies have started into existence, and the extraction and sales of these latter are now equal to what the old companies were doing five years ago.

By reference to the collection I exhibit, it will be seen that I can recognize eleven distinct seams which are more or less worked. The same series of seams extends from Newcastle to the Wollongong district, disturbed and broken up only by comparatively modern eruptions of porphyries and basalts.

On the lands of the Australian Agricultural Company, a few miles from Stroud, a seam more than 30 feet in thickness crops out in the length of a creek, and this thickness has been verified by several trial pits sunk on the dip side. There are many partings of shale and fire clay, and the coal is of various quality in the thickness of the seam, but there is quite sufficient of good coal for profitable working, if its inland position did not render it wholly unavailable in face of coal so easily accessible from the sea-board as that of Newcastle and Wollongong.

As regards the geological age of the coal of New South Wales, it would be easy to add pages on this subject, if I did not think it irrelevant, except so far as the question of the geological age of a coal is inseparably connected with its commertial value. That is to say—though there may be, and there is much bad coal in the palæozoic or true carboniferous series, a really good coal in the oolitic, lias, or tertiary deposits, is a thing unknown. To class the mineral fuel of New South Wales as belonging to either of these latter formations would be at once to discredit and condemn it in the market of the world, until, despite discredit and condemnation, its merit were discovered; when it would be tardily acknowledged that the condemnation had proceeded from an error in science, arising out of deficient or too superficial an investigation, or the too facile application of inapplicable theories.

A reference to the collection I exhibit, will settle this long-disputed question; and for the reasons stated I may be permitted a few words more on the subject. All the seams of the New South Wales coal-field from the lowest which interculate with silurian fossils (spirifer, radiata, &c.), Devonian flora (Lepidodendron, Cyclopteris, Adiantites), and the Bellerophon and Crinoidea of the mountain limestone, to the highest and latest deposited seams. in which the flora (Equisetacaea, Asterophyllites, &c.), approach the oolitic character, are all deposited conformably and almost in parallelism, one on the other; covered also conformably by 1000 feet of sandstone, upon which again has been quietly deposited the Wyanamatta beds, which I have called the false coal measures, for with all the appearances of being coal-bearing, they contain no coal, but a flora probably nearer approaching to that of the oolite.

The lower beds of the coal series of New South Wales are, then, geologically older than any worked in Europe; whilst the upper beds represent the most recent of the European true carboniferous formation. And as all the coal seams, from the silurian upwards, are deposited conformably, I must conclude that this portion of the globe was comparatively free from violent eruptions and disturbances from the Silurian to the Permian epoch, and that the alternate submergencies and elevations of the land must have been slow and gradual.

In stating my opinion here as to the age of the carboniferous deposits of New South Wales, I am in part repeating only what I reported after my first examination in this field in 1853. I then wrote: "The coal is a true coal, not lignite, or a deposit of the tertiary epoch, but belongs to the true coal formation—is overlaid by regular beds of secondary sandstone, lying in conformable strata upon it."

Seven years ago, I wrote and reported: "The geology of our cold-field commences with the sandstone, and I believe this sandstone to correspond with the lower beds of the Permian system." It is a atisfaction to me to learn that this opinion is borne out by researches carried on under the direction of the Rev. W. B. Clarke, and I shall avail myself of the earliest opportunity of pursuing this examination in the field where the interesting specimens exhibited by Mr. Clarke have been found.

WESTERN AUSTRALIA.

This colony was first settled in 1829. Perth is the capital, and the principal other towns are Freemantle, Guildford, Albany, Augusta, Peel Town, Kingstown, York, Ruphury, &c.

York, Bunbury, &c.
Area—100,000 square miles. Population—8711. Revenue—£45,775. Expenditure—£45,171. Imports—£128,200. Exports—£44,198.

Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief—His Excellency John Stephen Hampton Commanding the Forces—Lieutenant.Colonel J. Bruce.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

South Australia has three great staples, and the value of its annual export is shared in pretty nearly equal proportions between the three. Thus in 1860, the agricultural export was valued at £499,102, the pastoral export at £573,368, and the mineral export at £446,537, the miscellaneous products being valued at only £57,319.

It contains an area of 300,000 square miles. And the population at the late census was 127,000. The administration consists of the Governor, Legislative Council and Assembly, these two houses being electives.

Governor-in-Chief-His Excellency SIR DOMINIC DALY.

VICTORIA.

The total population of the Colony has increased from 410,766 in 1857, to 549,910 in 1861, viz., 322,984 males, and 226,817 females.

SUPREME COURT ARRANGEMENTS.

Tuesday, 9th December, 1862. REGULE GENERALES.

I The Terms and Bittings of the Court for Causes, and the Gaol Delivery at Darlinghurst, and for the hearing of Equity and Insolvency Appeals, shall, during the year 1863, be holden respectively on the days hereinafter mentioned. The holidays to be observed in the Court shall be those mentioned in the Law Calendar for that year.

2 Terms—The Terms will commence severally on the 7th day of April, the 6th day of July, the 5th day of October, and the 30th day of November; and will end respectively on the fourth Saturday following; excepting the Fourth Term, which will end on the second Saturday following.

3 New Trial Motions-On the first four days of Term (after such metions on the first day as are then usually taken) Rules Nisi for a New Trial will have precedence of all other business.

4 The Like—On every succeeding Monday, Wednesday, and Thursday in Term the like motions, and motions to make any such Rule absolute, will have precedence.

5 Tuesdays and Fridays in Term-On every Tuesday and Friday in Term (except the first Tuesday) Criminal and Crown cases will have precedence; secondly, Motions, other than as aforesaid; and lastly, Demurrers and Special Cases in Civil matters.

6 Equity and Ecclesiastical—The Primary Equity Judge will sit on every such Tuesday and Friday at 11 o'clock; on the former day for Equity, and on the latter for Ecclesiastical matters, and such others as by the 32 Vic., No. 14, may be taken by one Judge only. After disposal of which, he will sit in Equity.

7 The Like out of Term—The Primary Judge will sit at the same hour, on every Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, out of Term; on the two former days for Equity only, and on the last mentioned day for all such matters as last aforesaid, and then Equity.

8 Equity Appeals-Appeals in Equity shall be set down for the fourth Monday in each Term, and be heard on that day and the three following days. Provided that in December they shall be set down for the first Mon.

day after Term, and be heard on that day and the two following days.

9 Insolvency Appeals—Appeals in Insolvency matters shall be set down for and heard on Friday, the 27th day of February, 8th day of May, 5th day of June, 28th day of August, and 27th day of November.

10 Special Days for Appeals—Appeals in Equity and Insolvency will be heard, also, on such additional days as the Judges shall from time to time order.

11 Fines and Estreats—Schedules of Fines and Estreated Recognizances shall be returnable on some Friday in Term, at 11 o'clock; to be then heard before one Judge only. 12 Chamber Business-Chamber Business will be taken on Tuesdays and Fridays, at 10 o'clock, in Term and Vacation slike. Provided that a Summons may be returnable on any other day, by order of a Judge. 13 Vacations-The January Vacation shall continue as at present : but. for the July Vacation, there shall be substituted a Vacation commencing on the 8th and ending on the 27th day of June.

14 Business in Vacation—No business will be taken during the Vacations. other than such as is specified by the Standing Rules. Provided that, in the June Vacation, Summonses may be made returnable in Chambers, in eases of emergency, on any Tuesday or Friday.

15 Sittings for Causes—The sittings for Causes will commence on Monday, the 2nd day of February, the 11th day of May, the 3rd of August, and the 2nd day of November, and will end respectively on the fourth Thursday

16 Common Juries-Common Jury Causes shall be set down exclusively for that Thursday in the Jury Court-But, after their disposal, or if there be none entered, Causes for trial by Juries of Four may by taken.

17 Special Juries-The first fortnight of each Sittings, in that Court, shall be for the trial of Causes by Special Juries of Twelve. But no such Cause shall be set down, except for the first three days—as at present.

18 Special Juries Remanets-Every such Cause, the trial of which has not been commenced within that fortnight, shall go over as a Remanet. Provided that two Judges may allow any such Cause to be taken after that time (and before the following Thursday) if they think fit.

19 Juries of Four.—No Cause, for trial in the Jury of Four, shall be set down in that Court for any day of the Sittings earlier than Thursday in the third week.

20 Transferring Causes-Causes, on the list of either Court, may be transferred to the list of the other (for those Sittings only) by order of two Judges, for trial on any day not earlier than two clear days following-and not being before the day for which the Cause was first entered.

21 Remanets Generally-Remanets from any Sitting will have precedence over Causes; and shall be set down (each according to its appropriate list, and the class of Jury to which it belongs) for the next Sittings by the Prothonotary.

22 Saturdays—There will be no Sitting of the Court in Sydney, in any branch of its jurisdiction (except for the trial of Prisoners, and excepting the last day of Term) on any Saturday.

23 Provise—Provided that any argument or Trial, not concluded on Friday, may be continued on the next day, if the Court or Presiding Judge

24 Sydney Criminal Sessions—The Sessions of Gaol Delivery at Darlinghurst shall commence severally on Monday, the 30th day of March, the 23rd day of June, and the 28th day of September; and on Thursday, the 17th day of December.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

The Rev. Mr. Johnson was the first Chaplain that arrived in the colony. In March, 1794, he was joined by the Rev. Samuel Marsden, long remembered and celebrated for a lifetime of evangelistic spirit and Missionary labour, both here and in New Zealand, to which he undertook no less than seven voyages. Shortly after the arrival of Mr. Marsden, the senior chaplain, Mr. Johnson, returned to England, so that for long he laboured here alone.

The first Archdeason, Rev. Thomas Hobbs Scott, arrived May 7th, 1825. He was succeeded by the Venerable Archdeacon Broughton, who arrived September 13th, 1829, and who, on its erection into a See, in 1836, was created Bishop. He died in 1854, when he was succeeded by the Rev. Dr. Barker. In 1841, Bishopricks were erected in New Zealand; 1842, Tasmania; 1847, Newcastle, Adelaide, Melbourne; 1850, Lyttelton, Western Australia; 1858, Wellington, Nelson; and 1859, Queensland.

SYNOD OF AUSTRALIA.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

The first Presbyterian Minister who arrived in the colony was the Rev. Dr. Lang who preached his first sermon June 8th, 1823. He laboured alone till 1831, when in consequence of his exertions, 5 others were added. Since that time till 1840 various others arrived; and the Presbyterian Church having previously existed in a disunited state, it was then united and formed into the Synod of Australia. Two secessions have taken place since, viz., that of Dr. Lang in 1842, and that of the Synod of Eastern Australia, in 1845, the latter of whom separated on Free Church principles.

The Synod meets annually, in St. Andrew's Church, Bathurst-street, Sydney, on the first Wednesday in November, at 7 p.m.

Moderator of Synod—Rev. Thomas Craig, Parramatta. Clerk of Synod—Rev. James Milne, Paddington

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF EASTERN AUSTRALIA.

This Church was formed in 1846 by the secession from the Synod of Australia of three ministers and a large body of the people. By that Synod's retaining the designation of "in connection with the Established Church of Scotland," it virtually implied an approval of her principles, and thus rendered necessary the retirement of those who held that body guilty of sin in submitting to the encroachment of the civil power in spritual things. Though it recognises the principles of the Free Church as her principles, the Synod of Eastern Australia is an independent body, not subject to any other Church whatever, either direct or indirectly.

The Synod of Eastern Australia meets on the first Wednesday of November in each year. Place of Meeting, St. George's Church, Sydney.

Moderator of Synod-Rev. William Grant, Shoalhaven Clerk of Synod-Rev. Arthur M. Sherriff, Dungog General Treasurer-W. Buyers, Sydney.

Educational Establishments.

UNIVERSITY OF SYDNEY.

The University of Sydney was incorporated by an Act of the Colonial Logislature, which received the Royal Assent on the 9th December, 1851. It is empowered to confer degrees in Arts, Law, and Physic; and is endowed with an annual income of £5,000.

By a Royal Charter issued 7th February, 1868, the same rank, style, and precedence were granted to graduates of the University of Sydney as are enjoyed by graduates of Universities within the United Kingdom. The University of Sydney is also declared in the amended Charter granted to the University of London, to be one of the institutions in connection with that University, from which certificates of having pursued a due course of instruction shall be received, with a view to admission to degrees.

to admission to degrees.

The Hadiof the University is particularly grand and imposing; its open roof is designed from that of Westminster Hadi, and the windows are of stained glass of the richest description; being at the same time emblematical of the progress of the arts and sciences, and of those who founded colleges and otherwise were fosterers of learning. At each end of the Hall is a large transomed window, of seven lights in width. In these are represented the respective founders of colleges in Oxford and Cambridge. The Oxford or West window was the gift of Sir Charles Nicholson, Bart; the Cambridge or East window that of Sir Daniel Cooper. In the sides of the Hadi are three-light windows, six on the North, and five on the South, in which are represented various men distinguished in English history; each window having the effigies of three persons who itourished at or about the same period. Each of these windows, like the others, is the gift of individual liberality. All the figures are life-size, and in the highest style of modern art. The Hall is 135 feet long, 45 broad, and 70 feet liigh.

Business of the Society.—Life Assurance in all its departments; Issue of Present, Deferred, and Reversionary Annuities; Granting Endowments for Children and Old Age.

The Second Investigation of the Society's affairs shewed as the result of the five years' business, ending February 28th, 1859, a profit of more than 50 per cent. on the liabilities. After making an ample reserve, the profit divided among the Members amounted to more than 40 per cent. on the value of the policies. In his Report, dated October 3rd, 1859, the Actuary states that "there is every reason to expect that the existing business will, on future occasions, shew an increasing ratio of profit.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

All letters, book packets, and other parcels posted in New South Wales must be pre-paid by affixing thereon Postage Stamps of sufficient value.

2. Any letter for delivery in the Colony, if the Stamps on it are not grossly deficient, is forwarded, but charged with double the postage deficient.

If grossly deficient, the letter is opened and returned to the writer.

Any letter for transmission to the United Kingdom, if stamped with not less than a single rate of postage, is forwarded; but charged with the postage deficient, and a further single rate of postage as a fine. If not bearing at least a single rate of postage, the letter is opened and returned to

But all letters for transmission to any Colony, or Foreign Country whether direct or through the United Kingdom, will be opened and returned to the writers, unless they bear thereon the full amount of postage

5. Letters received in the Colony from beyond sea, not regularly posted at the place of despatch, are charged with Sea Rates of postage.

6. Letters sent overland to any of the neighbouring Colonies are charged the same rates of postage as if sent by Sea.

7. Letters on being re-directed are chargable with a new and distinct rate of postage.

8. Any person can have a letter registered, by affixing on it a Registration Stamp, in addition to the proper postage, and presenting it at the Post Office during office hours; when a receipt for the same will be given.

9. Inland letters must be posted half an hour before the time fixed for despatch of the mail; but late letters are received to within a quarter of

Miscellaneous Information.

The Annual Mean Temperature of the Air in Sydney is 61.3. In January, the average may be stated at 71.7. In July, at 49.8.

The MEAN ANNUAL RAINFALL in Sydney is 49 inches. It exceeds that of Melbourne, and Hobart Town; and even of Wellington, N.Z.—in which last, the Annual Fall is 39, 30.

YEARS OF FLOODS IN THE COLONY. The years 1806, (22nd March.) 1808, 1811, 1816, and 1817, all of these on the River Hawkesbury, 1819 and 1820, on the Hawkesbury, and at the Cow Pastures, and Maitland; 1826, in Sydney and Cumberland, at Maitland, and also at Bathurst; 1830, on the Hawkesbury and Hunter Rivers; 1832, at Maitland, Paterson's Plains, &c.;—in 1840, at Maitland, Singleton. Muswellbrook, and on the Rivers Peel and Namoi, 1843, on the Hunter, at Goulburn, and some other places. In September and October 1844, there were Floods nearly all over this Colony; in Port Phillip, (now Victoria,) and Tasmania In 1846, on the Hunter, Paterson, &c.; 1848, on the same, and the Hawkesbury; 1850, during July and October, chiefly at Goulburn Berrima, Camden, the Hawkesbury, and Wollongong. In 1851, on the Rivers Hunter, Murray, and Murrumbidgee, and at the Turon. The year 1852 is the most disastrous; a Flood occuring on the Turon River in June, and on the 25th of that month at Gundagai, where nearly seventy persons were drowned. In July 1853, again at Gundagai, and along the Murrumbidgee; in June, July, and August, 1857, at Maitland, and on the rivers Hunter and Hawkesbury generally. In 1860, on the Nepean and Hawkesbury; and in the Illawarra District, and some others.

YEARS OF DROUGHT IN THE COLONY. The years or seasons 1811, 1813-14, 1823-24, 1827 and 1828, with part of 1829, were periods of drought, more or less severe; as also the years 1836-37, and 1838. These are all memorable as seasons of drought; but the last mentioned year, and 1839—to the month of October,—were the most distressing. Almost every part of the Colony, in the early part of 1839, seemed burnt up. The summer of 1842-48 was another period. The first three months of 1846, and the summer of 1847-48, the same. The year 1849 throughout, and to May 1850. In January of that year, the North Shore (Sydney) was on fire for several successive days. The first portion of 1851, and the summer of 1857-58, were also periods of drought; though not of great intensity generally.

^{*} The preceding account of the Temperature, Floods, and Droughts of New South Wales, is compiled from a valuable paper by Mr. W. S. Jevons, contributed to "Waugh's Australian Almanac" for 1859.

SHERRIFF & DOWNING,

Booksellers and Stationers,

BOOKBINDERS.

AND

ACCOUNT BOOK MANUFACTURERS.

256, George-street, Sydney,

BEG respectfully to inform the Public, that they carry on the following branches of business; in all of which it is their constant aim to study the wants of, and give satisfaction to, those who favor them with their patronage.

ACCOUNT BOOK MANUFACTURING.

All sizes and styles of Account Books for Merchants, Bankers, and others, with plain or intricate rulings, with or without printed headings, in all the various styles of binding, manufactured on the premises.

Squatters can have Station Books made up on the shortest notice, such as Sheep, Cattle, and Horse Returns, Stud Books, Muster Rolls, Ration Books, Pay Lists, Pay Orders, &c.

S. & D. would respectfully call the attention of the public to the opinions of the Press, regarding their workmanship, in this and the Bookbinding Department.

Specimens exhibited in the Sydney School of Arts Industrial Exhibition.

"The specimens of Bookbinding in its various branches, by Sherriff and Downing, are well worthy of a second look. The Vellum Account Books, with Russis bands, and various other specimens, could not be exceeded for beauty."—Empire, 5th March, 1861.

"The specimens of Colonial Bookbinding by Mesars. Sherriff and Downing, are very creditable, and must be pronounced equal to those of a similar description produced in England."—Sydney Morning Herald. 7th March, 1861.

Specimens exhibited in the Maitland School of Arts Exhibition.

"A case exhibited by Messrs. Sherriff & Downing, of Sydney, is well worthy the attention of those who take an interest in Bookbinding; the specimens exhibited being fully equal to the home productions, both in strength, appearance, and durability."—Maitland Ensign, 26th June, 1861.

"Messrs. Sherriff and Downing exhibit a case containing samples of the various descriptions of Bookbinding, which, for strength and finish, will stand the test of comparison with the productions of the mother country. The samples range from the strong binding of the Ledger, to the costly work of the full bound gift book in morocco antique."—Mailjand Mercury, 2nd July, 1861.

"Such specimens of colonial workmanship it would be a work of supererogation to praise. It proves beyond a doubt, that binding of the most tasteful, as well as of the most durable kind can be done in the Colony."—Maitland Ensign, 4th July, 1861.

BOOKBINDING.

All kinds of Bookbinding executed on the premises, from the plainest to the most elaborate and elegant styles in cloth, roan, calf, morocco, Russia, and velvet, and in a manner not to be surpassed out of London. S. & D. flatter themselves that they are in a position to turn out the work entrusted to them in a manner highly creditable to themselves and also to the colony. The Commissioners for the Colonial Branch of the Great Exhibition of 1862, have awarded a Medal to S. & D. for having sent to London the best specimens of Bookbinding.

MAP MOUNTING.

Maps of all sizes mounted on cloth, done up in cases for the pocket, or mounted on rollers and varnished for Office or Library use.

PAPER RULING.

Account Books of the plainest, and also of the most intricate patterns, executed. Account Sales Paper, Account Current Paper, and Sermon Paper, ruled on the shortest notice.

cash Advances are granted to assurers, on their Folicies, with integer at the low rate of six percent.

The whole of the profits in the Participating Branch go to the assurers, less a charge of ten per cent for management and the Company's guarantee, an arrangement unequalied for liberality by that of any Company in the Colony. It offers greater advantages than can be afforded by any Mutual Society, the expense of management being less, while the Assured are free from the serious risk and personal liability as partners, which they would incur by insuring in such a Society.

GEORGE WATSON, Resident Secretary.

AUSTRALIAN

ovident Society.

Established January 1st, 1849, and Incorporated by Act of . Parliament of New South Wales.

For the purpose of transacting every branch of Life Assurance, Annuity, and Endowment Business.

At the Second Investigation into the Society's affairs, completed during 1859, it was found that the transactions of the five years ending February 28th, 1859, had been so profitable as to produce A SURPLUS OF MORE THAN FIFTY PER CERT. ON THE LIABILITIES. MORE THAN ONE-THIRD OF THE ASSETS WAS PROFIT, ACTUALLY REALIZED AND INVESTED for the exclusive benefit of the Members of the Society and their surviving friends.

A LIFE ASSURANCE POLICY effected in the middle of 1849, by a person then aged 40 years, for £500, AMOUNTED TO £692 13s. in 1859, and is increased by subsequent annual Bonuses. The Bonus of £110 19s. 5d., allotted to it in 1859, is now worth upwards of £52, or about seventy per cent. on the Premiums paid during the previous five years. If this were devoted to the reduction of all future premiums, they would be diminished by nearly THIRTY PER CENT. For each year the Policy may endure from 1859 till next Investigation in 1864, A FURTHER ADDITION OF £12 6s. 7d. WILL BE MADE TO IT.

A DEFERRED ANNUITY POLICY effected in 1849, (the Annuity to commence in 1867,) was in 1859 INCREASED FROM THE OBIGINAL AMOUNT OF £20 PER ANNUM TO £29 1s. 10d.

AN ENDOWMENT of the original amount of £400, payable in 1870, was in 1859 increased to £503 17s. 8d.

From the Actuary's Report, the correctness of which has been certified by Professor Pell, it appears that the existing Assets have been so valued "as to render it highly probable that during the progress of the next five years, they will be productive of an increasing surplus.

TABLE OF RATES for all ordinary plans of LIFE ASSURANCES, ANNUITIES, and ENDOWMENTS may be obtained at any of the Society's offices; and the Rates in case of SURVIVORSHIP ASSU-RANČES, ASSURANCES whether by ASCENDING or DESCENDING SCALE of PREMIUMS, or by a LIMITED NUMBER of PREMIUMS, &c. ;—PRESENT or other ANNUITIES ;--or any description of EN-DOWMENT may be ascertained on application to the Actuary.

GENERAL CONDITIONS with regard to Voyaging, Residences Abroad, &c., &c., unusually favorable.

IMPORTANT PRIVILEGES.

The attention of Assurers is requested to the following important privileges granted by the Legislature of New South Wales to the Members of this Society.

All its Policies are protected, after a certain term, to a gradually increasing extent against the operation of the Insolvent Laws.

Policies effected by married women, are protected against the debts and control of their husbands.

The families of Assurers of £100, or smaller sums, who die intestate, are saved the expense of obtaining letters of administration.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

The Premiums in this department, during the past year, amounted to £292,408, being an increase of £29,425 over the business of the previous one. The total increase of the last six years is upwards of £160,000, an advance of revenue probably without parellel in magnitude within so short a period, excepting where two or more companies have occasionally amalgamated their respective businesses into one,

The remarkable increase of the Company's business in the United Kingdom, as marked by the unerring test of Parliamentary Returns of duty, shews most incontestably that no Insurance Office has even distinctly approached the rates of advance which has been accorded by the confidence of the public to this Company.

The prompt payment of losses during the part year, which have been on a large scale, has shown the character this Company has always maintained throughout the whole world. It will only be necessary to add here, that the Agents can with confidence announce to their fellow citizens, that they may feel assured every legitimate claim will be immediately settled.

Small Charges for Management, the expenses at the Office being borne in due proportion by the two Branches, and Exemption of the Assured from the Liability of Partnership.

At the last Annual Meeting of this Company, a bonus was again declared to the Policy holders (insured with profits) equivalent to Two per cent. on the amount of their Policies, for each year they have been current; a continuation of success never, we believe, exceeded by any other Life Office.

THE SYDNEY INSURANCE COMPANY, Issues Policies for Protection against Fire.

For Sums ranging from £100 to £10,000.

The subscribed capital is £250,000, with unlimited liability of a large and wealthy colonial proprietary. The rates of insurance range from 3s. to 6s. 6d. per cent. for brick or stone dwellings; and from 4s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. per cent. for brick or stone shops, stores, and place so of business. Wooden buildings are charged special rates. Losses promptly settled. £27,000 has been paid by this Company for fire losses within the past five years. Small accidents, from fires in dwellings or shops, are recognised as claims and equitably settled. This being a Colonial Institution, the whole of the profits are retained in the colony, instead of being transmitted to England.

Further information can be obtained, and applications will be filled up without any expense to the applicant, at the Offices, corner of Pitt and Hunter-streets, Sydney.

Agents are appointed in every considerable town in the Colony.

N.B.—There is no exemption made in the above Company from payment of losses occurring through bush fires, country properties being insured against such casualties.

Surveyor—W. E. Kemp, Esq.

Fire Department.

Insurance against loss from Fire upon Buildings, Merchandise, and property of every description may be effected at the current rates of premium.

The distinctive character of the Company will ever be its liberal and prompt settlement of all fair claims under its Policies.

Life Department.

The assured are charged the lowest rates of premium consistent with perfect safety to themselves as well as the Company; and the Directors have particularly turned their attention to the more equitable adjustment of the rates of premium payable at the several ages of human life, having reason to believe that great inaccuracy generally prevails in this respect. Suppose, that at the age of 40, a yearly sum of £28 was to be devoted to life assurance, in the offices charging high premiums, that sum would procure £850. In the United Insurance Co., charging moderate premiums, £1000; being a difference of £150, which may be fairly considered a fixed and immediate Bonus.

The Tables comprise the Rate of Premium for effecting Insurances on single lives; by annual or half-yearly payments; by single payments, or by payments to cease on the party attaining a given age.

Survivorship Insurances.

Claims on Polices paid Three Months after satisfactory proof of Death, and never disputed except the Policy has been obtained by fradulent or intentional misrepre-
